YOU'RE SURE IF YOU BUT OUT
THE HONOR SYSTEM

"As far as I know there are just three kinds of honor systems in operation, and in my opinion it is a great mistake to discuss the honor system without making it clear which system is under consideration."

First—The system generally associated with the phrase provides that the instructor be absent from the room during examination and that the students themselves be allowed some obligation to watch for and report cheating. Having the word honor can be associated with this system is beyond me. The dishonest student is under the surveillance of thirty persons instead of one. His neighbors are watching him instead of the instructor. He can be removed from cheating because thirty persons are ready to report him if he does cheat. The factor of supervision has been multiplied thirtyfold.

How this realization that your neighbors are watching you—waiting to report you—can possibly develop a sense of honor is indeed remarkable. There is no honor about it. Advocates of this plan invoke a man's sense of honor and then thirty persons are set to watch him. So here we have a system where puts the dishonest man under the strictest, most insidious and complete supervision imaginable; and which asks the honest man to be a spy and a tattletale; and yet forsooth, markable. There is no honor about—nothing. The fact of supervision has been night, pall' of shoes belonging to student is much like asking a man to put down bread, at Dunkel's, a glass of water, and Equipment or can be associated with this system without making cheating because thirty persons are cleared for room mate. Referenices exchanged.

Second—Another system was invented because as many honorable students revolted at the first system. This one provides that a man shall sign a statement to the effect that he has neither given nor received aid. It gets rid of the supervision, the tattletale, and the tattling but asks a man to put down in writing the fact that he is honorable. It assumes that a man is dishonest until he denies the fact in writing. It is much like asking a man to eat a bread, because you cannot take his word; we cannot assume that he is honest, we ask him to put it in writing. Of course the system is only a little more contemptible than the first and grossly proves the word honor.

Third—There is a real honor system of course, one without system, tattling, or tattletelling, pledges, one under which the instructor leaves the room, and the students are absolutely free. Then indeed they ask their honor. Now are we ready for this system? That is really a debatable question and well worth consideration. I will not discuss it, for my sole purpose has been to eliminate these gross perceptions that misapprehend as honor systems.
