HUNTING YEAR 1.

Irish step dancing, and "It's Chubs" thirty-five minute in length. Classes are also to be organized for training, coordination of mental and physical traits, and for the development of various traits.

PROGRAM GIVEN FOR SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

The coming of the Mississippi Symphony Orchestra to the University is one of the great musical events of the year, and an annual event. Concerts will be given at 8:30 both in the afternoon and 8:30 in the evening, May 9, 10, and 11, in the Armory. Fifty players are numbered among those performers who have been presented in the University Armory.

The Mississippi Symphony Orchestra is generally recognized as one of the foremost organizations of its kind in the United States. M. Axel Meisner, conductor of the University Symphony Orchestra, after his tour of America said, "It is the great pioneer of the University Symphony Orchestra. After its performance in 1916, Charles Meisner, musical critic, wrote, "The great tradition of the University symphony orchestra is being carried on." The University orchestra is now in its third year. The orchestra is generally recognized as one of the foremost organizations of its kind in the United States. M. EYES ON ADMINISTRATION
The eyes of the campus are upon the administration. What does this mean? The constitution calls for an unwelcome interest in the Council part. What about the professional colleges? The student body would welcome a united view committed to a common professional goal. The one to lend this direction was Dwight A. Steiner, President of the University.

The professional colleges have an approximate enrollment of 1506; the non-professional college is limited to nearly 1000 students. The groups do not reflect the minority on the campus as a whole. The minority holds the majority of campus citizenship. The professional colleges have been united with the non-professional college in the proposed pact, but the non-professional college is not sure what will happen. The majority under the proposed pact does not have the support of the great number of students, managers, and the knowledge of governmental principles.

The administration has taken this to the majesty of the student body and the proposed pact? Can it disregard the general principles which are written into our democracy? Can it sanction a constitution which would be a ‘tyranny?’

THE LISTENING POST
The proposed pact is a ‘tyranny’ and we think that perhaps he may be right. Our ‘ravelled sleeve of one’ is a more tainted state than what Marlet’s ever was, so that something must be done to extricate us before the tape is cut out of the clear sky.

Well, there is more kick to cut down the size of the price.

You can tell a supplier by his look of contemplation.

EDITORIAL VIEWS
A Good Suggestion

“The World is taking itself too seriously,” says Premier Nitti of Italy, and we think that perhaps he may be right. Our ‘ravelled sleeve of one’ is a more tainted state than what Marlet’s ever was, so that something must be done to extricate us before the tape is cut out of the clear sky. And even Ramile’s eminently just complaint that the times are not so good as in the future may be an imposter under a constitutional presentation.

We are not sure what penalties Marlet’s would expect for our present maladies. With all their excellent qualities, neither of these gentlemen would likely express an intelligent opinion on professional values, or the Ovleriis Movement, or film films. If such affections as those had been added to their list, we are confident that neither of them would have succeeded in proving them to a court.

Premier Nitti, however, has some hope to offer. The art that he recommends consists in smiling and a cultivation of a sense of humor. Certainly, if Premier Nitti’s remedies were followed, many of our present difficulties would seem to vanish. Life would be much easier if we could all recognize a joke when we saw it, even if it were officially classed as an ‘international problem’ or a ‘grave symptom of a precarious equilibrium.’ The works of the General Public have returned him to the Peninsula legislature in an essentiallybuoyant state in which he usually appears in our newspaper cartoons. To hire we recommend Premier Nitti’s remedies, ‘guaranteed to effect a speedy recovery.’

In this good humor it is to be seen that our fine state of life, if things are removed, the other half will be evident.-Harvard Crimson.
