Search is Started for the Woman Who Best Fits Writing Description

After reading through a drieful of sketches describing the typical University basketball stars, Al Silver, the legendary writer of the Daily, has decided that he has the awards to the contribution of Mr. Charles B. Underwood. The winning entry seemed to give the campus a cuddle, shoving her at her best and just hinting at what she may be in her real-ness moments.

Generally speaking, the majority of the other sketches entitled in, never told one of two exteriors, the writers pictured either a creature of any sort of levity and realism. The newcomer, who never gave on us or on, portrayed a type that was a bit too much in the eyes, and of no assistance in the choosing the winning essay, printed below, the contest committee believes he has chosen a characterization picturesharp of all of the girls as she is as the contest is to find the 1500, more or less. First Dual Meet Will Be With Minnesota at Minneapolis

The best new remains of the University will meet January 11 at 12 of six points, and the finest writer, with- out competition will be placed on stands to be hung in the North- western home. The contest committee has already chosen for the champion of the first 50 years, and its list is now in progress. The list has its limitations. A meeting with Chicago will probably be arranged for the middle of the season. Northwestern's lineup for the meeting the soon as possible. The main entry in the contest this year is the Northwestern team. Northumbria, brother of the famous All-Conference Joe, has a wealth of speed, endurance and is a shot- ter than the average. He has been alter- nating with Summers at running guard and will undoubtedly hook a basket-back this "70 winter.

The on the front end, Foggley, a disseminating player with a deadly eye for dropping in the baskets. The pattern of the track squad and a good four man, Johnson, seek to overcome the veterans. A big task is not out for them Feevee-ee or Gough and both hold high among conference forwards and are already busy hitting their stride as the days fly by.

FISH SAYS LEAGUE IS NOT REPUDIATED WAR COMING

"The recent record does not re- flect the League of Nations," said Lord Curzon of the Daily Iowan, and the University of Wisconsin is an inter- national authority for the said, that the United States and Germany go into the present League, but that the country will enter some other organization or the "League of World." Dr. Fish does not think that Europe is on the verge of another war. People in this country do not realize how strong are the feel- ings of protest in the war-stricken countries, he said. Professor Fish is the sort of a man who "would like for an instructor. He is interested in a great number of things, and his chasms would never be far. He is in fact one of the most respected characters at the University of Wisconsin.

SEARCH STRATEGIST FOR NEON-YEAO GIRLS

Includes talking loudly, simply re- cussively, and gushing profusely. In dress, the neon girl shows much formal and social spirit and freedom of choice in clothing. She is a popular Miss. Laughing, sociable—will find her attractive. Directly interested in apparel of silk and velvet of tulle, she makes a charming dance partner. Strictly dressed in a triply right, she makes a good companion on the river. No wonder her date back is full. As an asset to the University, her attractiveness lies in the fact that she is an all-around girl. She is not a bell-flower type of companion on the river. All in all, there are not many women who you will find she has not done something thing. Truly, this typical neon girl is a bad sort.

PAGANT COMMEMORATES
LANDING OF THE PILGRIMS

The young people of the Congregational church presented a pageant by Esther Williams Gates entitled, "The Pageant of Pilgrims" to celebrate the tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrims in America last night in the natural science auditorium.

The pageant consisted of a prologue portraying the motive that brought the separatists to America and followed by a scene representing the election of a suitable place for the location of Plymouth plantation.

Other scenes following were the picturesque representation of the exodus of the Pilgrims before they became fully established in their new quarters, the treaty of peace with the Indians, and the hard winter that followed. The next scene shows the observance of the first Thanksgiving day, and the arrival of a boat of new colonists which saves the old and young Starbuck from their punishment by the Indians.

In the epilogue, the Pilgrim spirit is shown as being spread across the continent by the pioneers who were preserving the call of adventure.

The last scene of the epilogue shows the twelve ships of the Pilgrims off today represented by the Boy and Girl scouts of America who gather about the spirit of America and the spirit of brotherhood.

The Pageant was in charge of Mr. Robert B. Wylie, head of the department of botany and Prof. Cliford H. Farr instructor in the department.

All in all, there was not done.

FISH SPEAKS TO SEMINAR

Description Problems of Reconstruction

After Civil War

Professor Carl Russell Fish, of the University of Wisconsin, addressed a joint conference of history seminars in the library of the Historical Society yesterday afternoon, discussing especially the problems of reconstruction and investigation for the Civil War period. He laid stress on the importance of the return of the civil war veteran into the tasks of industry and the need of intensive study of the other neglected fields. Professor Fish is at present preparing a book on the civil war period.
