Iowa’s Largest
HONOR SYSTEM AT THE UNIVERSITY OF IOWA IS WORKING SUCCESSFULLY

The honor of the student regarding his class work and examinations is a very vital thing in the education of John Hutchings, of Des Moines, a former student at Iowa. Mr. Hutchings, a junior in the University of Washington, is visiting at the Sigma Chi house during his trip home for the holiday vacation. The honor system at Washington is a success from every standpoint, according to Mr. Hutchings; the instructors expect the student to be honorable and the students do not countenance evil or any form of copying in examinations. He mentioned one class of 900 students, in which the instructor gave out the questions for an examination, and then left the room. An upper-classman, using one member trying to copy from his neighbor's paper, said the man that he should leave the room.

"That is the attitude of the entire student body," said Mr. Hutchings, "and it is to be expected to see in every organization on the campus, the student regards the honor system as a part and parcel of his school life. If a student is caught cheating, he is expelled and never gets any sympathy from his fellows."

All student activities are carried on through the general student body, which is chosen by the students. He is a graduate student and with the advice of the board of regents has charge of all university student affairs. Under him are the president and members of The Associated Students of the University of Washington. The graduate manager has charge of athletic controversies, hires coaches, and in fact handles everything about the university. Recently he supervised the construction of a new $10,000 amphitheatre.

School spirit is developed more at universities on the Pacific coast, according to Mr. Hutchings. "When the University of Washington pregions, the student body gives a large party to each other on the campus, and the students lay aside their plans in order to cooperate, and every student there," Mr. Hutchings.

According to Mr. Hutchings, student parties have never been more popular or more exciting than at The Associated Students of the University. He has had a lot of fun and experience, even though it may be too much for some students looking for a concert. When asked about social activities at Washington, Mr. Hutchings remarked that the students do not date as much as at Iowa. "Mid-week funning" is rather the exception and the weekends find the greater number of the boys at some house party," said Mr. Hutchings. "I don't think Washington has gotten to the stage of "lately social" as many of our universities are famous to be."

HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION
DATES BACK TO YEAR 1857

On the third floor of liberal arts is an old library not much frequented by students, perhaps, and yet the libraries of the association back of it is almost as long as the history of the University itself. It is the library held by the Iowa State Historical Society.

The year 1857 by an act of the general assembly of the State of Iowas set aside for the benefit of a State university hear the same lectures as the Southern armies, and an old library not much frequented the name of the Annals of Iowa, and the old Greek and Roman manuscripts, which though erased and written over were yet able to be re­stored. Besides the Public Archives, various series pertaining to Iowa his­tory and bibliography are published.

The Historical Library contains some 40,000 volumes, besides several interesting portraits and war relics. There is in the library a portrait of Robert Lucas, the first territorial governor of Iowa, as well as a portrait of Benjamin Roberts from the Palace of the Normans in France in 1867.
