UNIVERSITY HAS HAD 14 EXECUTIVE HEADS

Three Acting Presidents Included in List of Iowa Administrative Officers—
First Two Appointed Refused the Position—One Man Into Foreign Service

President Joseph West in 1914.

When the University was founded on February 25, 1847, the position of president of the new institution was set as desirable a one as now. The first years the college was under the direction of George P. Larnard in 1848 and Leete Andrews in 1849 and 1850. They largely however fully investigate the proposition. Finally in July 1855 Amid Dean of the Alumni Law School, was elected president of the University and served until December 1855. President Dean having declined to comply with the requirements of the board, as chairman, Dr. Silas Totten, the rector of Trinity Parish at Iowa City, was elected to succeed him. He opened lines of official appointments heads of the departments and planned a reorganization of the college department.

In August 1862 President Totten resigned and Prof. Oliver M. Spear, one of the chair of languages, was selected as his successor. Professor Spear served the University for three years 1862 to 1865. In March 1865, Prof. President Lincoln appointed him as a commissioner to the Congress for the absence of fifteen months but at 1862 to 1865. In March 1871, President Black re signed and again Professor Leonard and the school of music. The residents' wards were added and services by eight different professors. The moral philosophy and the department of the arts and letters were expanded, and the law course was extended to two years. From 1879 to 1900 there were 1546 graduates. His resignation in February 1887, was followed by the appointment of Dr. Charles A. Schusterman, of Cornell University. During his administration the University's equipment was materially increased. The number of students increased from 613 to 134, and the number of instructors from 68 to 131. He died on September 29, 1889, and Dean Arno W. Carper was appointed to fill the temporary president until June 1890.

At this time George E. Maclean, President of the University of Nebraska, was elected and, in the September following, was installed. And so a new administration began what may be called the building era in the history of the University. In 1891 the "School of Applied Arts" was established in connection with the college of liberal arts, and in 1914 the school of fine arts was established and then abolished in 1893 and was continued as the college of liberal arts and the school of music. The building of the home economics department was in 1913. The graduate college was established in 1895.

W. Dean of Education President Macbride served the University for twelve years and upon August 1, 1911 submitted his resignation to the State Board of Regents. He was succeeded as president by John G. Bowman, an Iowa graduate and secretary of the Carnegie Foundation, who retired in 1912 and was succeeded by Prof. Thomas Barton Mearkle. President Mearkle served the University for two years but his death occurred on this year with adventuring years induced him to resign.

Dr. Walter A. Jessop was elected to succeed President Emeritus Macbride August 1, 1912. At the time of his election to the presidency he was the president of the college of education of the University and one of the leading American authorities on that subject.

FIRST CIRCULARS GIVE INTERESTING FACTS ON HISTORY OF UNIVERSITY

A pencil, slate, and note-book were absolutely essential to the first normal students at the University of Iowa, according to the second circular ever published by the University September 13, 1849. Every student was required to furnish, besides a pencil, slate, and note-book, a Webster's dictionary and a McNaught's atlas as his own personal equipment.

The first circular published September 13, 1849, which contained two pages, gave a summary of the different departments. There were eight departments in all, which were taught by eight different professors. The professors included the department of education, moral and political science, and department of philosophy.

Board in these days was from two dollars to two dollars and a half per month, according to the circular.

To the Theatre Public of Iowa City

In this announcement of my retirement as manager of the Englert Theatre, which goes into effect on March 1st, I wish to thank you one and all for your most generous patronage and kind encouragement with which you have favored me in my efforts as manager for the past five years of this city's playhouse.

A younger and more capable manager, Mr. Nate Chapman, will take charge of the theatre (his health permitting) on Tuesday, March 1st, and I am sure I can join with you in hearty well-wishes for his success.

Your admirable support of this theatre's attractions during my management is a sufficient guarantee for the new management to realize that no theatrical success of the show world is too big or expensive for Iowa City audiences.

Although I have regrets at the suggestion of a farewell week, still I feel I can mention with pride the quality of the attractions that fill my remaining dates at the theatre.

For Friday night the capacity of the house should be taxed, for Geo. C. Tyler, the theatrical producer of New York, who has staged nearly all of the Tarkington plays is favoring us with a performance of "CLARENCE" in this city. This will be presented here by a typical Tyler cast, accompanied by the costumes and scenery used at the Blackstone Theatre, Chicago.

For the attraction on SATURDAY AND SUNDAY is ROB FINLAY'S CINEMA GIRLS REVUE. I made a flying trip in my "Templar" to Cedar Rapids last Sunday to pass on the merits of this attraction. After witnessing the performance Bob stopped me in my rubbing around the dressing rooms in much the same manner as he has so often done the pies in the Mack Sennett comedy pictures. I assured him I would do all in my power to secure "late leave" for the fair ones whom I know would be pleased to see the attraction here. So ROB FINLAY and his CINEMA GIRLS REVUE will add variety to my farewell week's program in their miniature musical comedy here on SATURDAY and SUNDAY, MATINEE AND NIGHT.

For MONDAY NIGHT FEB. 26th, the final attraction at the Englert Theatre under my management I am pleased to announce will be the appearance in Iowa City for the first time, of the distinguished young actor-writer, WALTER SCANLON, in his scene production, "HEARTS OF ERIN," with the same cast which holds this season's record for Arlington Theatre, Boston. New York critics proclaim him "THE JOHN MCCORMACK OF COMIC OPERA," and a worthy successor of the late Billie Sumland. Through manager's reports from theatres where Walter Sumland has appeared in his tour from the East I have been assured that he is the equal of the Late Billie Sumland and Channey Olcott, when these two artists were in their prime.

In appreciation of your valued patronage, just a little more than the words, "Thank you" can convey, I am going to sell only one ticket to a person, so that I can present each patron to this performance with one complimentary ticket. I want to see the old Englert Theatre pushed from pit to dome for the last performance under my management, whether I realize enough from the box office sale or not to meet the guarantee for Mr. Sumland's engagement.

If the seating capacity of the theatre was great enough, I would issue a complimentary ticket to every person in Iowa City,—that's how grateful I feel toward you.

Reservations can be made now by telephone or otherwise for the Walter Sumland performance.

BY BRUCE GLOGU

TARKINGTON'S SUCCESS

CAN BE BY HARD WORK

Whether or not "Clarence" is the best light comedy ever written by an American, as the New York Tribune says, there seems little doubt but that this comedy by Booth Tarkington playing tonight at the Englert is the fairest one of it's kind's finest vein, and as well

The fact that George C. Tyler is producing it, is a way more persuasive of merit since he is one of the first draw to-day who are willing to risk money on a good thing.

"Clarence" is concerned with a critical chain of circumstances which en-vokes a most extraordinary yarn bearing that same upon his re-turn to civil life after service in a somewhat sheltered branch of the army. The arrangement is both clean and continuous.

Booth Tarkington, the author of many plays and books, entered the realm of fiction at a very tender age. He was sent to Phillips University Academy for his preparatory course, and eventually entered Princeton. Young Tarkington wrote, drew, sang, acted and composed music, and filled a place in many lines of student ac-

MAY ALLISON STARS IN

"The Marriage of Win. Adde," starring May Allison, will be the feature attraction at the Garden Theatre, beginning today. This new Metro production is one of the best in which Miss Allison has yet been seen. Miss Allison is again seen in the role of Lady Kitty Bristol, who finds from current and travels to London. In the place at which she makes the acquaintance of William Ade, and also subsequently marries him. Following her marriage to Ade, Lady Kitty meets his sense of political proportions, because of his being unaccustomed to a girl of wealth and prestige, and the party of her husband.

Influenced by Cliffe, Lady King publishes a book dealing with affaires of state. She then returns to the country from which she came, and only to be found there some time later by Ade, who forgives her, and finds her again in the arms of her former paramour.

BOWSWORTH COMING

IN VIBRANT DRAMA

Robert Howesworth of "Sea Wolf" has long been identified with roles of the sea and Alaskan locales. The J. Parker Rand, Jr., star has described the role and locales with which he has been so long happily identified—at least temporarily, and will be seen at the Theatre tomorrow, where his latest starring vehicle, "Thousand Yew," will open on Saturday and Monday.

In this production the title star will be seen as the villainess. This new Howesworth characterization exemplifies his versatility. However, the entire picture is not devoted entirely to this type of characterization, for Howesworth is seen also in the togs of the miner, the man of strength, the tower of the great outdoors.

FASHION PLEASURES

MOST SPECTACULAR

"Fashions" is unexceptionably one of the big photo plays of the decade, only a few of the amusing triumphs of the screen being comparable to it. It brings to the stage a bellitant star, who is new to this country, Pola Negri, a Continental artist of rare charm and possessed ability. Her portrayal of a little French millionaire who by dist of high-sounding phraseology becomes the ruler of a king, is one of the historic achievements of the screen. Those who witnessed her performance at the Pastime theatre last evening seemed a trait in praising her.

The story has to do with a reign of terror as a result of the king losing his title. Pola Negri doubles as the heroine and as Marie Antoinette, a famous little favorite and permits her to assume the party of her husband.

Influenced by Cliffe, Lady King publishes a book dealing with affaires of state. She then returns to the country from which she came, and only to be found there some time later by Ade, who forgives her, and finds her again in the arms of her former paramour.

WIDE RANGE OF STUDY
Nursing School. After 23 Years' Growth, Offers Broad Field to Students — Changes to Specialize.

The school of nursing, connected with the college of medicine and designed to provide thorough instruction and experience for those who desire to enter the profession of nursing, was organized in 1898 and then required a two years' course of training. Miss Mary Schulte was appointed superintendent of nurses, and the beginning class consisted of 12 girls. The course was extended to three years to keep pace with the increasing standards of the profession.

The school now meets all the requirements of state boards of registration, making graduates eligible for registration in any state. Miss Jane

From Donovan, Who Coached Football During Its Beginning To Jones, Present Director, Tales of Joy and Grief Have Been Written of Victories and Defeats

Since the first football game was played in Iowa City in 1887, 1120 have been collected, and the game has varied systems made results just as varied, and Iowa's football has been a success of ups and downs.

In 1889, Martin W. Sampson, assistant in English at the University, captained and coached the team, which played only one game, that with Grinnell.

The next season was the first in which the team was selected by a committee of students.

The first real schedule was played in 1896, and Iowa won her first unscheduled coach and was the first in the first games, taking the first place in the Iowa conference.

In 1900, Iowa beat Kansas team with the available material and began to realize that teams must compete in every big game. In 1902, Iowa took the coaching job in 1943. Football was a new science at Iowa and University form and Iowa looked to the east for help in football.

But the results were indifferent, the first bright spot being the 18 to 18 game with Chicago, the first between the two institutions. Wisconsin and Missouri trampled all over Iowa. Then the huge debts caused by bad team management was an ever-lingering sore. In 1906, Iowa team was satisfactory with defeats by Kansas, Michigan, and Minnesota. Wagenhur t of Pennsylvania was appointed head coach, and did a great job in coaching the team.

The team was called the Iowa City team. The season of 1912 was Hawley's third year in charge. The Iowa team was definitely an Iowa team.

In 1912, John G. Chalines of Lafayette college Pennsylvania was the coach in charge. He was the most notable victories were over Wisconsin, and the 12 to 0 defeat of Illinois in the Hawley era. And also Wisconsin was also in 1912.

In 1914, during this time the team was Hawley's best team, and was chosen as one of the four big games was all lost; North Dakota, Wisconsin, and Michigan had also in 1915. The season of 1915 was Hawley's best season. The first game of the year was at Iowa City.

Two Men Honored in 1912

Not all of the 1912 team were All-Western men. Miss Carrie, Miss Mary Roe, and Miss Alice were added to the curriculum of the game from the first. The audience that Alexander: Wales in 1898, and Iowa City for the use and support of a university, its majority via the First General Assembly of the State of Iowa was established. The staff of instruction in this state will take place next Wednesday evening, April 26th, in Close Hall.

The college of applied science, which was organized in June, 1896, had its origin as far back as 1567, when the University first offered courses in surveying and civil engineering. In 1856, according to the catalogues, it was made possible to acquire the degree of civil engineer by attending a course of study of five years required to graduate from the collegiate department and by making certain changes in the work of the first four years. This was the beginning of engineering at Iowa. In 1872, the engineering course was formally added to the other three courses in the collegiate department.

In 1872, a chair of civil engineering was established under Prof. Phineas H. Philbrick in charge. The course was enlarged in 1873 and in 1875 was made a separate department of the University on an equal standing with what was then the "department of liberal arts." These students were graduated in 1876 and three more in 1878, in which year the department was discontinued and the work again merged in the collegiate department.

Get Terril Mill Property

From 1875 till 1894, engineering subjects were taught in connection with the collegiate department. Professor Philbrick, Marvin, James, and Hunt were in charge of the engineering courses during this period, and 124 students were graduated from the course.

In April, 1895, the school of applied science in the college of liberal arts, was organized. Separate courses in electrical, mining, and mechanical engineering were added to the courses which up to that time had included only civil and electrical engineering. In this year, Mr. and Mrs. Russell founders of Iowa City presented to the University the water power rights of the Terrill mill property, to be used for the development of the school of applied science.

Raymond First Dean

In 1895 an attempt was made by the legislature to discretize the engineering department but the bill was defeated and $6000 was appropriated for a new building and a plan to develop the water power rights of the Terrill mill property. In 1896 an additional $10,000 was appropriated for the new power house equipment.

In September, 1896, Prof. William G. Raymond was appointed professor of civil engineering and head of the department of engineering in the school of applied science. On the resignation of Professor Wolf, who had been director of the school for the two preceding years, Professor Raymond was appointed director of the school in 1896, and in June of that year the college of applied science was created with Professor Raymond as dean.

Hydraulic Laboratory New

The new college offered courses in civil, sanitary, electrical, mechanical, mining, forest, and chemical engineering. Since then the course in mining and forest has been abandoned, but a new course in industrial training has been established. In January, 1903, the north wing of the present engineering building was built at a cost of $78,000. The cost of the building in 1900 and the new power house in 1907. The steam engineering laboratory was completed in 1903 costing about $6000 and it was equipped at a expense of $12,000. The new year saw a addition which doubled the capacity of the engineering building was added in 1903 and in 1907 the new engineering shops were being built at a cost of $3,000. The shops have since been enlarged by the addition of a building and a big increase in equipment. During the past two years a full-time testing laboratory has been built and partially equipped at the expense of the University. This is destined to be an important factor in testing engineers' work.

A. S. A. and A. F. Testard, 1909

There has been a sizeable steady growth in the engineering college. In 1903, two new members were added to the engineering faculty. These instructors taught the junior and senior courses in the engineering subjects to 113 students. During the fifteen years from 1900 to 1905 there have been 480 graduates from the school of civil engineering. In 1904, with forty-nine seniors to graduate this spring. The Associated Students of Applied Science, an organization of the students of the engineering college, was founded in 1910. This organization conducts an annual celebration known as the Mecca week, and also publishes The Territorial, an annual engineering booklet.

The Mecca celebration has become an affair of importance in the University activities. During this celebration, an original play, a parade, a dance, a banquet, and an exhibition of the work of the laboratories and shops are given. The Associated Students of Applied Science also provide a system of partial self-government which works in connection with the faculty for the development of the best conditions.

The aim of the college, as members of the faculty have said, is to conduct the best teaching school of engineering possible, and to develop honestly conducted and useful engineering research work.

Chamberlin says Union Building at Michigan is Crowded Social Center of Campus.

NOTE—The following intimate glimpses at the Michigan Union in operation on the Ann Arbor campus is excerpted from a letter by Edward H. Chamberlin '28, who is now an instructor in the department of economics at the University of Michigan.

By Edward H. Chamberlin

I wish you might drop in and let me show you through the Michigan Union some time. You would be at a loss to understand why the students at Iowa don't make themselves aware of the propinquities more than they do. I often wonder what Michigan would be like without the Union. I know that I never fully realized how such an institution would fit into the life of a big university until I had seen a place to be entered into only on rare occasions, and to be mired from the outside. and to be such as a class party or a Y. M. mixer, for example.

The Michigan Union is the true community center for Michigan men, fostering and developing the best traditions and ideals. It holds the place it does in the life of the student body largely because its ideals of service, and its ability to bring those ideals into realization.

It is estimated that between fifteen and twenty thousand people pass through the Union every day for a semester.

Membership in the Union is 100 per cent, each man student being assessed $5.00 a year on registration, which entitles him to all privileges. This makes the Union a truly democratic institution—out a rich man's club. It is estimated that between fifteen and twenty thousand people pass through the main entrance daily. The Union is the true community center for Michigan men, fostering and developing the best traditions and ideals. It holds the place it does in the life of the student body largely because its ideals of service, and its ability to bring those ideals into realization.

HAD BUILDING CLASH

Liberal Arts Building Constructed in the Style of Dbers, Adorns Weather, and Disagreements

Difficulties, delays, and clashes between the state superintendent and the contractor marred the construction of the liberal arts building. Two years and four months were required for its completion and for a time it seemed as if the work would never be finished.

On September 7, 1910, the sod was first turned for the new college building. According to the contract with Worven Robertson and Company of Chicago, the building was to be completed September 1, 1910. But trouble began almost at once. The cement failed to harden, and when it did, autumn rains set in and the workers were almost entirely idle for weeks. Cold weather came, the contractors were fired and the work was stopped.

Argument Over Paint

Then, with the beginning of the spring of 1910, value came again. Although most of the delay was the fault of the contractors, the state board of regents grew impatient and ordered that the foundation be completed by July 1910. Extra help was employed, and the wages of the bricklayers rose to the unheard-of rate of $4 a day, and finally the foundation was ready for the superstructure in August 1910.

For nearly a year the work progressed at a fair rate of speed, and the Pride of the Campus began to assume a definite form. But in June 1910, a long-reported clash between the state and the contractors came to a head. The speculations called for paint for the four low steps being more than that which the contractors estimated to use. State superintendents of Wright reported the cheapest paint and ordered Beck, the superintendent for the contractors, to use the proper material. This he refused to do.

Appeal to Pellew

The fire-proofed wood arrived to put in the tile floors, but Wright ordered them out to be worked until the job was painted as per contract. Being sub-contractors and under the authority of Duncan, the fire-proofed wood was not attention is to the state superintendent. However, a strike occurred and they accomplished little. Amazed by the long delay, the board of regents ordered the state superintendent to buy the proper paint and finish the work, the expense to be borne by the contractors.

Several days later Wright and his crew entered with the proper paint to begin work. Duncan, the contractor's man, ordered them out, backed by his gang of laborers threatened force if the order was not obeyed. Wright chose the safest way and re-told his story to the Iowa City police for protection.

Easter

At the time, the building was more than half finished, and the Worven Robertson contract expired on September 7, 1910. But in many ways the conflict gave in on the paint question and work was resumed. The reason for the sudden surrender is unknown.

The cornerstone of dedication took place January 23, 1911. Iowa City declared a holiday for the occasion and the town was blanketed in holiday decorations. Governor Carver and the state legislators arrived on a special train and were escorted to the campus by Clinton street by the entire student body of the University. The military battalions fired cannon at the parade and the carriage of the governor arrived at the campus. President McClellan gave the address of welcome while Senator Doherty delivered the main oration. Then Mother Caviness threw open the doors and said, "In the name of all the humanity of which this building is forever dedicated, I declare it open and ready for the purposes for which it is intended."

MANAGEMENT TO CHANGE

A. H. Blank of the Pen, Motion Picture, and Pioneer theaters, manager of the Garden theater, and Albert (Jop) Daniel, manager of the Pen Theater, have leased the Pen Theater and will take over the management in March 1, according to an announcement made by William McKeen, the present manager, whose lease expires at that time.
