IOWA CITY, IOWA
The best painting at the Seventeenth Annual exhibit of Oil Paintings by early American painters, is that of Asher Brown Durand's "Landscape," according to Prof. Edwin B. Starbuck, of the department of philosophy, in his lecture at the Burkley galleries last evening. This painting has the best balance and depth of composition. There is much of the comedy and little of tragedy in the color of composition. There is according to Prof. Starbuck, "I consider the portrait of Rev. Benjamin Oor Peers by Rembrandt Paul and that or the "Old Pensioner of the Revolution" by John Neagle the best of his portraits," said Profes­ sor Starbuck. "The lines in the por­ trait of Benjamin Peers are softened and the painting is unified and not made up of fragments like so many of these portraits. The old pension­er shows strength in his hands and in the color of comparison. There is much of the comedy and little of tragedy of life in that portrait."
