MICHIGAN STUDENTS GET JOURNALISM CERTIFICATES

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Journalism certificates which are an act of introduction to newspaper publishers and represent a high grade of scholarship in this field will be linear against this year by the department of journalism of the University of Michigan.

“Students who have completed one of the courses of the department and who have maintained a sufficiently high degree of scholarship are eligible for these certificates,” according to Professor John L. Brom, director of the courses.

The candidates to receive the certificates will be chosen shortly by the journalism department. The requirements include having maintained a B scholarly average in the courses in journalism—Press-Bulletin.
