STUDENT ENGINEER HOPES TO INVENT PERPETUAL MOTION

Perpetual motion, is it impossible? Record W. Fluke 38 of Ithaca does not think so. He has been working on the same for some time now and has it nearly ready to run. "The whole thing consists of only a few parts, very simple. The main part of it is a large cast iron wheel attached to the back of a bicycle. Across the center of the wheel areresh to iron bars about one and one half inch apart and twelve inches long. After the machine is assembled it will run without stopping for any length of time, according to the Inventor. He is planning to construct a machine of size next year that will make the machine in stop easily. Motion is required to start it, as it will start itself on its own power and run indefinitely.

Rent Twenty-four Hours

The inventor claims that at a future time he will have a machine similar to this one that runs for twenty-four hours without stop and thinks that this one will be a big improvement over the old one.

Perpetual motion is a subject that never has been quite settled, but the similarity between it and Fluke's machine is truly remarkable. It is quite possible that Fluke may be able to finish his machine and make it better still. Fluke is one of the greatest inventors of the present day, and will place that of the wisdom, the telephone, and many other of our present day machines. Fluke expects to finish his machine within the end of the current year and get it in running order. What the kind of a thing it is he has not yet decided.

"Julius Caesar"

No modern book has been written which so aptly lays human nature bare as Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar". It depicts the same people whom you meet every day and you will find that most of these people realize that thrift and success are very closely related.

A Frank Statement About the "Movies"

It is a fact that, during the past year, many excellent feature photographs have been brought to the Iowa City public advertiser, but one story, with every superfluous attached therein in an effort to make you believe that each succeeding film was the "grandest one in the world"

We believe that the majority of the public realizes this, and is starting to realize that the "pictorial scenes" are very often anything but "picturesque".
