PHOTOGRAPHED 1,300 MILES TO ATTEND UNIVERSITY

Abel G. Bakhtiar, a native Persian, and former student at Columbia University, walked from New York City to attend summer school at the University of Iowa.

Bakhtiar started from Columbia University on June 11, and arrived in Guthrie Center, Iowa, on July 11. He walked 398 miles, over the state line, in 30 days. He said his journey was possible because he had a great deal of determination.

He has been living in Iowa since May 1 to study at the University of Iowa. He is 24 years old.

KNOW YOUR UNIVERSITY

An opportunity is afforded during the summer session which is very freely presented to the students in the usual term to become acquainted with the university and to learn the interesting facts concerning the history, buildings, and departments.

Every Wednesday afternoon, a trip is taken to various parts of the uni-campus. The competent person in charge gives explanations of the places visited.

The train reason that more advantage is not taken of this is that few students realize the unusual features which abound in the uni-campus buildings, as well as the high national reputation which a number of the university buildings possess.

Almost everyone is familiar with the fact that Old Capitol was the first state house of Iowa, and is surrounded by some most interesting historical edifices, but very few students realize that within the university there are countless other famous things of which to learn.

For example, the only psychopathic hospital connected with a university is located here. The hospital is used as a very few institutions of the kind in the country, and was among the first to be started by a state. The dental and medical college ranks with the first two in the medical colleges of the United States.

Another building which should receive recognition is the Central Library, which is the second largest in the world, and is second to none in the nation. Other buildings on the campus are warranted by interesting historical incidents and traditions.

Recently the old building behind Old Capitol, which at one time served as the University library, has been vacated by the university administration.

The place of note are not limited with buildings, but there are several seven-principal museums, labatories, and observatories, in addition to numerous libraries, with which the average student cannot contact unless on a special tour such as the one offered each session.

There are countless other places fully as historic or interesting as those mentioned here, but which would prove of much value to visit.

A number have been pointed out

FROWEHN HIGH MAN IN BATTING Hicks Takes Second Place In Averages; Loses Out by Two Hits

George H. Frowehn, of Iowa City, was the leading batsman of the Hawkeye nine during the past season. In the ten conference games in which he participated he made 17 hits out of 41 times at bat, which gives him an average of .415. In previous years he had a batting fault, but this was corrected by Coach J. R. Adams. In addition to being the best batsman, Frowehn was a consistent pitcher and hurled his teams to victory in four games.

Wayland Hicks, of Brooklyn, was runner-up for the batting honors. If he had had two more hits he would have been first place. For his presence in batting Frowehn won a ten inch silver bong being awarded by the Academy. The batting averages follow:
