Iowa Dean Advises On Mental Tests and Testing

The work of Prof. Carl E. Seashore, dean of the graduate college, who is in Washington, D.C., received a very kind word. One of the tests worked upon which is of national-wide interest is the introduction of psychology in the civil service.

A new type of examination is being worked on by a group of psychologists. It will bring pilots together and tests their ability upon tests. All pilots will be tested on their ability to pass immediately after the examination.

Dean Seashore spoken on an advisory capacity in reference to mental tests and tests used in the army. "As a result of the psychological test in the army during the war," said Dean Seashore, "we have a permanent plan for the specialization and personnel rating."

First order of business will be in the entire army organization.

A committee which occupied a major part of our time," said Professor Seashore, "was one for the purpose of studying the psychical nature of the soldiers. This was started upon by various fields, and is being continued by the office of the general staff."

Another one of the topics which came up was the study of the atmosphere in relation to man, such as the effects of weather, the different mental and physical capacities, and the social mental activity as the past year.

With the Dean's assistance another organization was formed for the purpose of presenting a financial support for the biological study of sex from a strictly scientific point of view, without reference to propaganda.

A project prepared by Professor Seashore, which has a nation-wide basis, was the introduction of self-tests for the development of individuals in this country under the same per cent law. The new law calls for the admission of an amount of a given country of the per cent of the total number of people from the United States to be admitted.

Dean Seashore's book on the subject of the university was written in a scholarly style and has been a standard for the department of graphic and plastic arts. The frame was specially designed for the purpose of the American society for the purpose of literary and artistic interests. The university library was committed to the school, the staff of the University of Iowa, and the public library.

That was the largest, the movies, and the evening offerings.

The University library will be closed all day, as will other University buildings, including the student center. In the morning, the time of the plans for the fall will be from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. No delivery of mail will be made.

Materials at Currier will be carried under the sun, except breakfast, which is at the regular time.

The secretary of the Iowa City Commercial club said that no celebration of any kind had been planned here today. Celebration, however, will be observed by the students at the University of Iowa, after the last day of classes, under the Department of War, for the university library, and the public library.

STUDENT GEOLOGISTS BECOMING ACCUSTOMED TO WIND AND WEATHER

The field course students who are working in the Black Hills this summer are rapidly becoming seasoned to outdoor life. They have given up wearing their best suits of the spring winds, and are well named, although the weather is not hot. In fact, the evening is so cool that sheep can be heard on August 21.
