STUDENTS WILL HONOR MOLIERE

Professor Baudin Will Give Talk on French Dramatist

The general assembly for next Winter session of the University of Iowa's literary club, the Thespian society, will meet Thursday evening in the Students Union. Professor Clara M. Daley of the department of history is toastmaster. Prof. Charles C. Nutting said yesterday that he had had several invitations to speak in Iowa, and he hoped that he would be able to come before the start of the summer session. He has so many engagements he has been obliged to respond to all of them but he is going to give a special talk to the Thespian club.

TEACHERS

EXTRA CLASSES TO BE GIVEN THREE PLAYS

The members of the classical club will stage three productions this winter in order to improve the general knowledge of the students. Professor E. D. Benjamin of the Classical department is in charge of this program and it is expected to provide entertainment.

CHEERS OUT!

For it is from The Daily Iowan that you learn of the doings of your fellow students. You learn of their accomplishments, but you cannot "iron out the wrinkles" of the story or the "ears in the ear" as has been revealed by a search through the files of our exchanges. In short, it has been impossible to determine. The Daily Iowan is the only college newspaper in the United States of America which has four issues a week during the summer months. Out of the large number of other publications which are devoted to such matters in the regular semester, only a very small percentage of them are the product of a time that is characterized by a third of them than two or three weeks. The majority are weekly publications, and all are issued weekly.

Among the daily newspapers of the universities in the Big Ten, only three are continuing publication during the summer months. The Daily Illini of the University of Illinois and The Daily Cardinal of the University of Wisconsin are both issued weekly papers during the summer, and the Daily Northwestern of Northwestern University is issued bi-weekly.

Among the institutions of the East, only a few are issuing summer papers, and in a few instances the faculty has been unable to see the necessity of such a publication. However, the Daily Iowan has been the only weekly publication put out by the public with the obvious result:

The college as he is known somewhat in the Pacific coast institutions, although the University of California is continuing its student paper during the summer as a weekly basis.

As a consequence of this comparison of the two successful policy with that of other student newspapers during the summer season, the Iowan is somewhat proof of its accomplishment, and will attempt to maintain its lead over the other publications permanently.

The announcement already made concerning plans for the Iowan during the regular term next year contains the information that the Iowan will be an eight-page paper, six days a week with a full staff of sports, and will have many other new features, including telegraph, news service. This is merely another indication that the "official newspaper of the University of Iowa" will continue to grow among the leading college dailies of the country.

"Ten Dollars for Blood" would be an appropriate caption for the blood transfusion announcement in the liberal arts building.

I have no wish to minimize this column with my own opinions to the exclusion of those of everyone else. But after the decisive steps which the women of the campus have taken during the last week I feel the need of giving a grand rub:

I heard one disquieting remark on the campus the other day. Just after the announcement came out that the women intended to foster a dinner, a certain man of temperament opined with more or less enthusiasm: "Well, I don't expect them to do it, but it seems to me that they do have a little spirit somewhere even if it is present mostly in the hands themselves. I imagine, though that there are some men back of this movement.

What an idiotic thing to say! I think it is straightforward that there are some men behind this dinner. In profanity and initiative are two qualities that women are famed for. They have never had to call in the men for ideas; they simply are not prone to push into things as are the men. That is the reason for the delay.

Another man said that he wishes to be as quiet for saying that his bet was that the women's dinner would never come up to the men's in pure and contentment. That may be seen, of course, but I do not believe that the standard which they set was so extremely high as to cause so many extra words. Well, that disperses the men.

A more serious problem now is the existence of opposition from a few of the women on the campus. It is very early to say that there should be any opposition at all. The trouble is that the two rather lazy classes, the women who are staying over from last year, and the women who went but have not been taught and are here for extra work, have not had an opportunity to voice this in an issue. The regulars say that their idea of a dinner evening is to attend a dinner and listen to music which has long since been heard with constant warning.

Department of Psychology

A. K. Agilab

Monographs

The eighth volume of the "University of Iowa Studies in Psychology," edited by Professor A. K. Agilab, head of the department of psychology and anthropology of the national research council, has been issued. Mr. A. K. Agilab, has been chief of the division of psychology and anthropology of the national research council, and Washington, D. C., has been issued as part 4 in the "Psychological Monographs." The first of the Iowa publications appeared in 1927 and the others have been put out at intervals of three or four years when the material was of sufficient volume to warrant it.

The book has 282 pages, consisting of seventeen articles, eight of which are the considered subject matter of doctor's theses. All the rest of the articles represent work done in or from the laboratories of the University. A critical summary of the volume will appear soon from the department of psychology.

The contributions in this volume are as follows: "Wave Plane in the Operative Localization of Sensor" by Professor A. K. Agilab; "The Role of Intensity in Auditory Wave Print" by Harry W. Baldwin; "The Intensity-Locus Law and the Concentration of Phon" by Bisnor Allen Auditory; "The department of physics and setting of the graduate college; "Measagery of Hearing Through the Total Range" by C. E. Love; "A Measurement of Auditory Acuity with the Iowa Pitch and Binaural Thresholds" by Benjamin the 2-mile run as well. The essays were written both might be compared with the world's record in pole-vaulting and in baseball but have not the athletic who could break a record. The entries in all these foolish arguments of them will be illustrated by large letters showing some of the best pictures collected by Mr. Job. His collection of bird pictures is probably the largest in the United States," says Rev. Mr. Bennett.

HOPFETT WILL MEET HIS CLASSED MONDAY

Herald Y. McFadden, instructor of English, who was injured by a fall last Tuesday while horseback riding, is well on the road to recovery. He expects to be able to meet his classes Monday.
