PRESCRIPTION REMAINS HANG ON FOR MORMONISM

The evidence of Joseph Priestley is, A. W. as was recently asserted by the Saturday Review, is a critical condition for the perpetuation of the Mormon Church. If it were to fall at the hands of O. J. N. N., it would mean disaster and the end of the Mormon Church. An opinion is under consideration by the President of the University of New York, in which a definite decision is made to end all Thursday meetings.

MISS KLEIN BACK FROM NEW YORK

Miss Anna Klein of the Arts Beauty Salon, has returned from her annual buying trip East, and she reports that the business houses there are looking out for the student as being very promising — the prices are as low as the street would warrant — and the student is not thinking too much about the money she is saving. The large stores and shops were crowded with buyers, and money was spent more freely than ever before.

Miss Klein has a canoe for the girl with limited funds, which is one of her practical ideas. She always-sized her own buying trip, and she reports that the houses there are looking out for the student as being very promising — the prices are as low as the street would warrant — and the student is not thinking too much about the money she is saving. The large stores and shops were crowded with buyers, and money was spent more freely than ever before.

HENSON WANTS MAKE COME CHRISTMAS

Prof. Ernest C. Henson, general supervisor of the School of Art, called a meeting of the students and instructors in the school on Monday night, and he called for a make come Christmas. The meeting was attended by a large number of students and instructors, and it was decided to hold a make come Christmas sale on the Friday and Saturday following the meeting. The sale will be held in the Art Department, and all students and instructors will be invited to participate.

The Cowboy of the Old West

The cowboy of the Old West was a stranger to the modern generation. He was a symbol of the American West, representing the pioneering spirit and the raw, untamed wilderness.

Dress

The cowboy's attire was functional and practical. He wore a leather chaps, a wide-brimmed hat to protect against the sun, and a long coat with multiple pockets for carrying tools. The boots were sturdy and durable, with a Vibram sole for更好的 traction.

Food

The cowboy's diet was simple and rough, consisting of beans, bread, and other durable foods that could be easily prepared and carried on the trail. The meals were often cooked over an open fire, and the ingredients were simple and readily available.

Politics

The cowboy's political views were shaped by the values and experiences of the Old West. They often held strong opinions against centralization and the control of the federal government.

Social

The cowboy's role in society was that of a protector and a law enforcer. He was often hired to keep order in the remote areas where the law was less present.

Military

The cowboy was a significant force in the military, especially during the Mexican-American War. Many cowboys served as scouts and guides for the soldiers, providing valuable information about the terrain and the local population.

Conclusion

The cowboy of the Old West is a symbol of the enduring spirit of the American West. His legacy continues to inspire and inspire others to explore and understand the history and culture of this great region.

ATTENTION

Due to a typographical error, the details in yesterday's paper were omitted.

Engineering for the Buyer is not enough that electrical apparatus should be carefully conceived, skilfully designed, and exactly manufactured. Engineering, to fulfill all its functions, must go beyond these necessary steps and do a still more enlightened service. It must apply the apparatus to its uses, so that not only in design and construction but in service as well, all the conditions that must be reckoned with are fully satisfied.

This function of Westphal's application engineering covers many fields, and changes itself with many responsibilities. It is engineering that concerns itself with essentially engineering for the buyer.

BRITISH WOMEN TAKE STUMP IN ELECTION RACE

Lady Politicians Display Great Skill; Twenty-Eight Entertain in Washington Coming Election

(British News) London, Oct. 4.—Flying batches of British women politicians, who are leading a national campaign in a locale here known as "stumping," are covering the entire country. The movements are an outgrowth of the women's movement, which has been making considerable gains in recent years.

In both cases women are seen promenading, in groups of twenty-eight, through the English districts, as in the United States. The campaign is being made by women politicians, and is gaining considerable momentum.

Lady Anne Ffolkes for Salisbury

Lady Anne Ffolkes, the Duchess of Bedford, is the present leader of the campaign. She is being regarded as the greatest women politician in the country.

As she travels through the districts, she is being regarded as a conservative with Liberal sympathies. She is currently known in the district as the "Duchess of the Province." Lady Ffolkes was formerly the wife of the late Duke of Bedford.

The campaign is being endorsed by the Liberal party, and is being actively backed by the Conservative party.

The primary purpose of the campaign is to elect men to Parliament. The campaign is being held in districts where men have been elected, and is being directed by Liberal politicians.
