Those who upheld the wearing of the full dress suits by the students have held that the students should wear it in style for both men and women, whereas those who have approved of it have argued that with the establishing of the rules of more modern times, it is proper for the students to wear it. Paul F. Smith Jr. of Dubuque believes that the full dress suit should be the only attire for all formal occasions and has been the first to say that they are becoming less as time goes on and that the students have made the rule of modern times. In support of his belief he says:

"Undoubtedly, we do not look as we once did in the old church, but our new style of dress is more practical than the old one."

Richard D. Stoddard, president of the social committee of the University of Iowa, has expressed himself as believing that the giving up of the full dress suits and the wearing of the Tuxedo, as advertised in the Daily Iowan, than the weight of my own convictions, is that there is a proper dress for all occasions. It is as proper as the full dress for all.

Some recent editorials have noted that if a full dress suit is to be worn, it should always be followed by a full dress suit. The Daily Iowan, in an editorial, has stated that the wearing of the Tuxedo is proper at all times and that the students should wear it. A Tuxedo should be more practical than the full dress suit, which is falling out of favor in the social world. The Tuxedo is more practical than the full dress suit and is more suitable for the social world.

ATHLETIC BOARD VOTES AGAINST PREP TOURNEYs

Favor Eight Games On Grid Schedule; Wisconsin Analogizes

A definite scandal on the advisability of holding high school basketball tournaments was given by the board in essential of athletics at the recent meeting held on Wednesday, November 16. The board is of the opinion that the long held high school basketball tournaments play no great game away from bases of tournaments, which take their form from such studies. Their profound observance is too much of a drain on the vitality of the prep school athlete who has not reached full physical development.

After conferring with the state high school authorities the board decided not to hold a tournament this year. Instead, the high school officials will hold a tournament at Iowa State, which has held tournaments for a number of years, instead of the usual school basketball activities. Probably a number of the smaller schools will hold tournaments, but the board has signified their intention to discontinue them.

Favor Second Proposal

The board voted in favor of the second proposal. Their reason was the first proposal was not carried by a sufficient number of votes, and the second proposal was carried by the coaching staff and players. The third suggestion does not seem practical under the conditions.

A letter of apology from President H. E. Winstead, University of Wisconsin, was received in regard to the athletic controversy between the University of Wisconsin and former Coach John Rich-ards of Wayne State. Football fans were reminded in the Big Ten tale that when Frank Richards opened against the athletic officials at Illinois and former Coach John Rich-ardson told them to leave, the rewards were more of a beautiful nature that was anticipated. Mr. Richards has since received his post-natal credit from the board.

The attitude of the shoe repairer in America is changing. Gone are the days of the old-fashioned cobbler who worked with a hammer and nails. Modern methods and machinery are used today to repair shoes. The shoe repairer is now a skilled craftsman who uses a variety of tools and techniques to ensure a quality repair.

THE MAN FOR THE JOB

The board of direction of the Iowa Memorial Union acted wisely in inviting Colonel Edward Marion C. W. Small to complete the Memorial Union campaign. Not only the board but the whole University is fortunate that he accepted. If any one record is the drive for funds, it is Colonel Small's. What he says that the campaign will be successfully completed in sixty days we have enough respect for his ability to stand by his statement.

THE Sounding Board

A WINTER SCENE

A sudden flake drifted down the street With pinny air and duty feet,
But, ah! the pavement's icy lane.

That should have warned her to beware
Recalled her hand and stumpy open toe
Crowned by that nose turned to the ale,
And caught her as the ivy so cool.
Her foot rose in the atmosphere
That certainly will not await you long
Came forth one startling, silver note;
The pipe and innocent little hand!
It sounded very much like BOOM!

BROOKE.

Two much talk and too little action is the trouble with the United States, says William G. McAdoo. Exactly, and William G. is one of our very best little talkers.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Those who wish to make progress (or evening clothes) for the Military Ball, or who wish to get into the party should not despair. We have arranged for a ringside seat in the press box, and Sunday morning's edition will carry a complete account of the festivities. We have an assistant, in charge, against the possibility that we might do something. Naturally born characters who are in a position to aid in the interview will be interviewed during the interval.

Sunday morning's Iowan will sell at the usual price—3 cents.

As a rule we have never frowned, believing that the liberty of the student to think and debate for himself is one of the most sacred blessings; but by no means encouraged. The following contravention of the rules involves a serious and improper conduct.

Bead it and weep.

Money in the last analysis determines whether

A young man or woman shall take up a higher education. Until high school graduates today have the inclination to go on with their scholastic work and after the point has been reached when even they have this desire, the whole question will devolve on the pecuniary factor.

For the boy or girl, only as wealth increases, will enrollment increase, and that is, after the point has been reached. The cost of a college education, since it remains fairly constant, does not need to enter the argument.

But in the 50's a student thought 800 average meant to spend during the whole year, about 800 acres to be the average expenditure, Price is compression, see in the above table, the most important thing, that is, V.

Present-day methods of production and distribution are producing increasing individual wealth, but the law of diminishing returns has begun to take effect in a surprising way. It is probable that for a long time, enrollment will continue to a standstill, comparatively speaking. It is possible, of course, for the plan, for 7000 acres to go up. But if productiveness is in order, we should see that when the enrollment of the University of Iowa has reached the 8000 mark, a certain number of innovations in numbers will have been established.

Figures printed elsewhere on the editorial page show these facts. In the West where people are just beginning to realize fully the advantages of a higher education, the enrollment shows the greatest increase, and will continue to increase until all high school graduates have been educated in the advantages of college training. After this increase in enrollment will depend solely upon the wealth barrier. There has been little increase in wealth during the past year, and at the point where the charitable donor factor is about seventeen, the increase is fairly small, with very weak support.

America's Colleges Still Over-crowded

Another Substantial Gain in Enrollment Recorded—The Figures Below Do Not Include Attendance at Summer Schools or Extension Courses

The University of Iowa increased in the percentage of increase in 1922. The University of Iowa ranked fourth among the top fifty and most influential colleges in the United States for percentage increase in number of students from 1921 to 1922, according to a table prepared by the Boston Evening Transcript. The University rating, released in the 1922 issue, was nineteenth in increase in actual numbers.

The University of Iowa led all the colleges in the Big Ten group for percentage increase and was second among twenty-one colleges for increase in actual numbers. The comparisons indicated do include attendance at summer school or extension courses for the year 1922.

From 1921 to 1922 the University of Iowa increased in percentage of increase and in half of the school year, according to the table presented by the Boston Evening Transcript. The University rating, released over the 1922 issue of the same year, was only 20% more than the previous year enrollment and 10% half of the school year, according to the table presented by the Boston Evening Transcript. NEW WAVE OF HAIR BOBBING SWEEPS ENTIRE BRITISH UNITED STATES

Who says that bobbled hair has gone out of style or is just on the wane? In a wave of bobbled hair sweeping the country, there is evidence that it is popular for men as well as for women. In Charlemagne wore his hair bobbed, and the ends curled nicely, too. In the eleventh century, Henry I of France had bobbled hair. Eve had bobbled hair. The anonymous author of "Job" as Drama wrote, "He bobbled his hair as a fad, face is neither means new."

The "New York Times" reports that "bobbled hair is a fashion statement in today's society. It is worn by men and women, and even children. In the late 1920s and early 1930s, bobbled hair was all the rage. People of all ages, from young children to the elderly, were wearing their hair bobbled."

"So That He Cannot Forget"

Those last hours together.

"Once upon a time, in a far-off land, there lived a young prince named Michael. Michael was the son of a king and a queen, and they loved him very much. Michael's father was a great warrior, and his mother was a skilled healer. Michael was a curious child, and he loved to explore the world around him.

One day, Michael and his father went out on a hunting trip. They had been out for several hours, and Michael was beginning to feel a little tired. His father noticed this and warned him to be careful, as the forest was filled with danger.

"Watch your step, Michael," his father said. "There are many things out there that want to hurt you." Michael nodded, and his father continued, "But don't be afraid. I'm here with you, and I'll protect you." Michael smiled, and his father went on, "Now, let's continue our journey.""
Eclipse of the sun

This is the month when the sun is outshone, and we mortals draw greater warmth and sustenance from that humble product—sunlight.

It is the warmth of the holiday spirit, which causes human hearts to glow when temperatures are lowest. Mother's cooking—the family smelt—Christmas tree and cranking logs—what would this world be without that?

In preparing the family good cheer the college man sports in each that nobody ever blinks his to it. It would hardly come to the club man to stay over the songs of Alonzo Menter for the still fonder One at all.

The football man would normally suspect that his younger brother is dying to have his drop-kick for the "V" line. The Press leader would not propose to think that any among those disciples who have been waiting for his sally act, lest you may his own sister.

And indeed, college boys would never suspect that any conversations possess such powers as book, professor or exercise activity could not even entertain a gentleman. Who Acts the Peaks.

We note the foregoing.
