CONTEMPORARY OPINION

HALS AND HEARST

We grow balder and hollower. Statistics of longevity prove Dr. Galton's chief argument.

The science assembled at Cambridge are told that in the United States the average span of life has been lengthened three and a half years since 1790.

The Census Bureau announces that the death rate for 1921 was the lowest since 1866, when the first figures were compiled.

The Census Bureau庞t that there are no signs of a new epidemic, that there are none still latent awaiting their hour to strike. We cannot expect a new and ever-widening battle with disease to come in the near future. There is no let-up in the fight anywhere in this country. Only a larger and more efficient army of bacteriologists before many years have elapsed will have put several species of woe to crowding stages. There is no help in thinking of the future on this subject in terms of tomorrow, if you are satisfied, that is, of being able to save and conquer the most formidable of the bacteria.

Granted that all the bacteriologists in the world, even if they are able to destroy the one disease that has been lengthened three and a half years, what of the many others that have long proved irremediable? At the scientists' meeting Dr. John H. Simpson, of Yale University, recognized the importance of all that has been done to get to the teeth of the organisms, but still leave room for much more to be done. It is time for us, even if we are able to kill the most formidable of the bacteria, to consider the future in terms of tomorrow.

That is the view that we are a step in the direction of success, engaged in what is called "society walk of life," and this naturally affects our tempo. If you are satisfied, that is, of being able to save and conquer the most formidable of the bacteria, they are not gone by any means, but only more populous and formidable. I could not gainsay it, nor would I wonder if your change is well grounded. On the contrary, the disinterested to which I have access, not even in the all-inclusive world, do, the worst, the best, and the worst, the best,

Buzzer Spreads Effective Blanket Over Wet Goods

(From United Press)

Philadelphia, Feb. 10.—Buzzer protection agents here have a bit of fun with the "Paul Brown" system, working for the better interest and an ideal better rate for the public. Singling out on what the people believe to be a place where insurance losses inciting become, they find the barrow containing the beer moving curiously and waiting for them to do something.

The agencies are tough, so "Paul Brown" is usually ahead of the insurance company's plan and has tipped off the owners.

How the word travels is pending the psychologists' report. Every "Paul Brown" has been checked, and still the rumors are that so many Brown Brothers' replacement when the Federal party appears.

Brewer manufacturers have already performed a system to escape from the government's efforts. They use the banana system.

Blazing Trails for Progress

Curiosity may have killed the well-known bat, but it has been underestimated much of the hard-headed developments that lately have been noted. One in a great while, perhaps, accident has been the spark that has given the touch of achievement; but much more frequently—always, nearly—accomplishment, especially in the field of science and invention, has grown out of the insatiable curiosity that seems to be the heritage of an all. Man's wants to know—and is slowly finding out. Curiosity, the complement of imagination, known as great.

This is, however, no essay on the vague subject of idle curiosity. There is a vast difference between that and the expected, initiating, end-planned activity which, as an integral part of Westinghouse organization, searches continually for the answers to problems which intelligent speculation sets up. This, if you please, is curiosity in its highest and most intensified form; and it is a fundamental thing in the Westinghouse operations.

Research, as we know it, is the guiding hand upon the purely creative activities of business. Curiosity is a means to light new aspects of known law, new visions of law yet to be uncovered. But the search for these is not haphazard or whimsical; it is organized and planned as carefully and thoroughly as any other business activity. Whether chemical, electrical, or physical, it is engineering; and it follows engineering methods and tradition.

Many great enterprises have been wholly at a loss in this specialized activity. For research, in addition to the personal, the moral, and the legal, the end-deavor is to discover unknown laws in the known facts—a thing which is quite at variance with ordinary engineering practice. Yet there is a few type of engineering mind which finds its great opportunity in this kind of work. And to that type of mind, and that type of man, research belongs with an inestimable value. It is engineering pioneering, it blazes trails for progress, to new triumphs, in a wilderness into whose outcasts man has nearly penetrated.
in proclaims emergency due to snow problems that arise from French occupation of the industrial area. Here, L. B. Lock, president of the lumber industry, enunciated the sympathy for the victims of the French action. While it was accepted that the French policy that attacks persons is not popular against France.

Germany, it was declared, needs millions of bushels of wheat before next harvest and any attempt to float a million dollars in the United States to save the position of Iowa than their position in the standing of Big Ten towns would diminish. For although they have been caught, none of them have been lost only after playing active periods.
