Clendingen Says Errors Often Made in Medical Reporting

By LOGAN CLANDINGEN, M. D.

People who have difficulties with medical reports are a derogation of the profession of medicine, but the profession is often guilty of errors which are very much in the hands of the patients.

It is the kind of statement that doctors make, but which is not always made in the minds of the patients. It is often very difficult for the patient to understand what a doctor is saying, and for the patient to understand the doctor's language, the patient often get very close to the truth of the matter.

But doctors often have the power to allow or to prevent such errors from being made. The patient should understand that what he says is the truth, that he has the right to be told the truth, that he has the right to know the truth.

The patient should understand that the doctor is not always right, that the doctor is not always on the side of the patient, that the patient should not be afraid to question the doctor, to ask the doctor to explain what he says, to ask the doctor to explain what he means, to ask the doctor to explain what he wants the patient to do.

Japanese Face Stiff Resistance In Attempts to Swallow the Vast Lunghai Area of Central China

Center Efforts Around Rusted Village Of Taierchwang

SHANGHAI, April 7 (Since: Ch. Ag.) - (Far Eastern News) - A village of 5,000 people near the Lunghai area of central China has resisted at least a temporary Japanese occupation since the Japanese army reached it on the first day of the month and when it will end is unknown. The village is 10 miles south and southeast of Shanghai and about 10 miles north of the Yangtze River. It is protected on all sides by mountains and is isolated by these barriers.

The village has been the focal point of Japanese efforts to push the Chinese Nationalists south from the previous Japanese advance to within 20 miles of Shanghai. Taiwan is southeast of Shanghai and 20 miles southwest of the village.

A number of attempts have been made to capture the village by Japanese armies and several attempts to surround it and starve it have been made. None of these attempts have been successful.

It is believed that the village is being held by only a few hundred men and that the Japanese army is subjected to continual sniping and rifle fire from the mountains.

Rustred village has been a number of years the focal point of the Japanese effort to occupy the Lunghai area of central China. The village is surrounded by mountains and is isolated by these barriers.

Sleet Storm Inflicts $200,000 Damage on Trees in Iowa City

Beautiful Landmarks Ruined By Worst Storm in Recent Years

Budding Trees Increase Material Losses To Owners

More than $200,000 damage was done to trees in Iowa City by the ice and sleet during the last 24 hours, according to estimates made by experts in the forestry department of the university.

The estimate is based on an average value of $50 for a full-grown tree and two or more small trees on city lots.

J. W. Flinn, professor of forestry, said that the worst storm he had seen in 10 years had wiped out much of the budding trees which last year were added to the city and county park reservations.

Many beautiful old trees that have been damaged and continue to give us as much as we can have been admired and cultured by many throughout the country.

The storm, which was even more prevalent in the country than in the city, was responsible for the heavy damage to the city's trees.
