Research Work Begins Again At Iowa Lakeside Laboratory

Zoology, Botany Groups Will Work Until August 19

Research, the hermit of all sciences, begins again protection at the Iowa Lakeside Laboratory. We have a new administration, a new board, a new library, and the best music may be heard each evening. With a record enrollment of more than 300, including faculty members and returning students, the Laboratory will be charged with new activities and problem-solving opportunities. A wide range of research activities will be undertaken, including work in ecology, botany, zoology, and environmental science.

The Laboratory is located in the midst of the richest opportunities for research among representative plants and animals. There is a variety of the finest native wild lands, from marshes and fields to forests and mountains. There is an abundance of land and water for study. The Laboratory is designed to provide a place where the student and the teacher of biology in high school and on the college level can make contact with the profession in the country.

Two teachers and one student of the laboratory department of the University will be in residence in the Iowa Lakeside Laboratory. Prof. Dr. C. M. King will be in charge of the laboratory department in charge of the biology section. Other members of the faculty--Dr. E. E. Bill, Prof. R. C. Reed, and Prof. W. C. King--will give lectures and conduct laboratories.
