Berlin Reports British Set to Desert Greece

Gains 5 Loaded Troop Transports South While Laving Argosian Sea

BRUSSELS, April 12 (AP)—Five loaded troop transports, which had been reported by a German military source as being on the way to the Balkans, were said today to be northwest of the Aegean Sea. Lt. Gen. Ion D. K. Berardi, a Greek officer who had been captured by the Germans, was reported to have been released. The report of the transports was confirmed by a German source in Berlin. The British, who have been reported to be planning a Withdrawal, were said to be using the ships to evacuate Greek refugees. The German source said that the transports had been ordered to leave the Aegean Sea. The Greek government had previously denied that any troops had been sent to the Aegean Sea.

The parade of opinion—Los Angeles Times

By Associated College Press

We suggest that the idea which America should adopt as a model for her future is to build her navy in accordance with the democratic tradition of the United States. The idea is to build a nation which will be able to defend itself against the two principal reasons, as we believe, that American society is not well equipped to handle the situation in which America finds itself on the great sea.

"Look at the blackest side of the picture and place your bets, but you can do it. It is also good to have a good foundation. The idea is to build a nation which will be able to defend itself against the two principal reasons, as we believe, that American society is not well equipped to handle the situation in which America finds itself on the great sea.

President Roosevelt has declared that he would like to see the American navy a force to be reckoned with. The American navy is a force to be reckoned with. It is good to have a good foundation. The idea is to build a nation which will be able to defend itself against the two principal reasons, as we believe, that American society is not well equipped to handle the situation in which America finds itself on the great sea.

The three possible outcomes of the war are: (1) You can't be sure of victory. (2) You can't be sure of defeat. (3) You can't be sure of anything.

It is not the same as to have hope and chance on all work done but the peace after the war. It is not the same as to have hope and chance on all work done but the peace after the war.

Poetry Reflects Trend

Centers on Foreign Settings, Actual Life, Observes Paul Engle

By CLYDE REYNOLDS

Today we feel what we have often felt: the influence of the foreign in the American literary scene, particularly in the poetry of the last decade. (The American poet, too, is feeling the influence of foreign settings and foreign ideas. In this respect he is at least myopic.)

Paul Engle, who is at work on a book about the present-day American poetry, says that the foreign influence is felt in the poetry of our time, but that it is not as strong as in the past. He feels that the foreign influence is felt most in the poetry of the past, and that the American poet is now more influenced by American ideas and settings.

DEAN’S LECTURE ROOM

Dr. S. E. Seidemann, professor of English at the University of Iowa, presented a dramatic reading from "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" for the opening of the "Women’s Day" program to celebrate "Women’s Day" at the University of Iowa. The event was held in the College of Liberal Arts at 7 p.m. on Thursday, March 8.

"Women’s Day" is an annual event that celebrates women’s achievements and contributions to society. Dr. Seidemann’s presentation focused on the character of the Hunchback of Notre Dame, who was portrayed by Mary Wollstonecraft, an influential writer and philosopher. The reading highlighted the themes of social justice and equality, which are central to both the novel and the event.

President Rockefeller was among the attendees of the event, and he expressed his admiration for Dr. Seidemann’s performance. "I was moved by the way Dr. Seidemann conveyed the depth and complexity of the character," he said. "It was a powerful reminder of the importance of recognising and valuing the contributions of women in society."
