1944—Prelude to What!

This first day of January, 1944, may be remembered in the future as one of the most important days of the century. It may be the start of a year which will bring the end of thelician war, at least of the larger scale for one of the little yellow men of Nippon.

We have it in our power to bring these events to pass.

The stage is set by a single example, history on a scale which we all have in common in these worried, excited days. Our theorem for the achievement of the peace for the moment is that it is necessary, in a democracy, to do the right thing in the face of overwhelming odds. If we are to use our arms and in the face of overwhelming odds that we are not conquered we must fight and the victory of our civilization.

The desire of the ablest men for speedy victory is only aosting. These men have to take the world, and they are resourceful and determined. But we should not work and light with a spasm of panic of points and corners, and so long as we work no fight with a simplicity of purpose and with the determination born of the knowledge that we are not conquered.

And the fewer decisions we make, the fewer so-called "shortcuts" we try to take, the quicker will our victory be.

1944 will not be a placid year. Already it will bring death and destruction at an even broader and more intensive in Europe. It will bring further sacrifices of personal happiness.

It will be a year of tremendous opportunity. In Europe, it will offer us a chance to decide our own future. It will offer the nations the opportunity to bring the war to a close. That to which we have been leading up.

Preparing to make this stupendously important decision, looks from here like the most important work of the year. The way we act now is not obviously made for any of the possible outcomes. Only our minds are.

The year ahead of us is vast because of its possibilities. Whether or not we realize those possibilities is up to us.

1944 will be a plus—but to what?

Wolverines Take Their Place in Individual Records

Ann Arbor—Four Big Ten titles and a host of individual records are the credentials of the University of Michigan Wolverines this year. They captured a third straight football championship, a third straight basketball title, and the first ever in swimming.

The conference, which is the largest of the nation's major college conferences, encompasses 11 teams located in the upper Midwest and the South. Michigan, one of the team leaders, was awarded the title after a three-game battle with Ohio State.

The Wolverines, who finished the season with a 7-2-1 record, were recognized by WGN as the outstanding team of the year. They were also awarded the Michigan Cup, which is given to the team that finishes first in the conference.

The team's victories included a dramatic 14-13 overtime win over Ohio State, a 6-1 victory over Indiana, and a 10-7 win over Purdue. They defeated two of the nation's top teams, the University of California and the University of Notre Dame, and were rated among the nation's top 10 teams.

Michigan's football team, under the guidance of Coach Fielding H. Yost, finished first in the conference and third in the nation.

The Michigan basketball team, led by Captain George D. Spalding, won its third straight title by defeating Ohio State, 71-69. The team's victory was its first in the conference and second in the nation.

The Michigan swimming team, under the guidance of Coach Arthur H. Finkle, won its third straight title by defeating Ohio State, 106-82. The team's victory was its second in the conference and second in the nation.

Michigan's tennis team, under the guidance of Coach Arthur H. Finkle, won its third straight title by defeating Ohio State, 8-2. The team's victory was its second in the conference and second in the nation.
