McGrath Calls for U.S. Economic Aid to Reich

Democratic Cause Hindered by Mass Food, Clothing Needs

The Frontline States must supply the German people with essential food and clothing in order to achieve the end of the Nazi regime, according to Dr. Karl J. McGrath of the University of Iowa, associate dean of the college of business administration.

"It is my opinion that the lack of food and is the existence of the German society's main economic problems, and the Congressman believes that the German people today are distributed at various levels and that we cannot hope to bring about a successful end to the war unless we provide for the hungry people of Germany.

"In order to achieve the end of the Nazi regime, it is necessary to supply the German people with food and clothing," McGrath stated. "There can be no question that the German people are hungry and that they need clothing in order to survive."

The congressman also pointed out that the German people are divided by the war and that the current economic situation in Germany is a result of the war and the division of the country.

"The German people are divided by the war and the division of the country," McGrath stated. "In order to achieve the end of the Nazi regime, it is necessary to provide for the hungry people of Germany."
