Economic Body Urges: Keep Tax Rate To Pay for Aid

WASHINGTON—President Truman's economic advisers called for continuation of present federal taxes to pay the costs of the Korean war yesterday. Speaking on the CBS network, they said, the United States could support the war on a balanced budget basis.

The council, created by congressmen in 1946 to predict tax needs and production, reported:

"The U.S. government, in its current military capacity, will need to finance the war at a rate of $13 billion a year. This is a higher rate than at any comparable period of time, including World War II."

"The council concluded that the United States economy will need to finance about $20 billion a year by 1950. This is a higher rate than at any comparable period of time, including World War II."

Boilermaker Running Game Too Powerful for Hawkeyes

By BUCK TURNLER

LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Purdue outlasted every other opponent with a special offensive line yesterday. It pounded Iowa City's Hawkeyes 20-7, to put the Boilermakers within striking distance of a Big Ten championship.

The Hawkeyes just could not stop anyone against the Boilermaker power. The Iowa City players were too tired to stop the Boilermakers charge for 65, Purdue added two field goals in the second period, tying the game at 13-7, and scored two touchdowns in the fourth period, including a touchdown on a 15-yard run by Boilermakers fullback Ron Shade.

The Boilermakers overpowered the Hawkeyes with their own version of the Six Million Dollar Man running attack. The Boilermakers rumbled their way over the Hawkeyes for their second straight victory, 20-7.

Boilermakers Gain—Halfback Norm Adams (18) of Purdue puts up two yards in the first quarter, as he gets by the tackle of Iowa's Jerry Dollar to give the Boilermakers a 7-7 tie. Center Dick Brook of the Boilermakers, looks on at UI's wildly jubilant Daily Iowan.

Survey Finds Instructors Willing to Be Graded

But Few Students Are Good Judges, Professors Agree

BY RALPH DARROW

A new poll, which was used to test students’ ability to grade classmate work, revealed that while most instructors are willing to be graded, few students are good judges.

The poll, conducted at the University of Iowa, found that 79% of instructors were willing to be graded. However, only 15% of students felt they could objectively grade their instructors.

The poll also revealed that most instructors felt that students would be better judges of their own work than of others’ work. This is likely due to the fact that instructors have a better understanding of the material and are more aware of the grading criteria.

However, the poll also indicated that instructors are concerned about the possibility of bias in student grading. Many instructors stated that they would prefer to be graded by colleagues or by a panel of instructors.

The poll included a section where instructors were asked to rate the quality of student work. The results showed that instructors are generally satisfied with the quality of student work, but there is room for improvement.

The poll also included a section where instructors were asked to rate their own teaching effectiveness. The results showed that instructors are generally satisfied with their own teaching effectiveness, but there is room for improvement.

The poll is the latest in a series of studies conducted by the University of Iowa on the quality of student work. The studies have shown that while students are generally satisfied with the quality of their own work, there is room for improvement in the grading process.

The findings of the poll suggest that instructors are willing to be graded, but that few students are good judges of their own or others’ work. This suggests that there is room for improvement in the grading process and that instructors should consider alternative methods of grading.

In conclusion, while most instructors are willing to be graded, few students are good judges of their own or others’ work. This suggests that there is room for improvement in the grading process and that instructors should consider alternative methods of grading.

What Is News, Anyway

By SAMUEL GARDIN
New York Post Pulitzer

A visitor from Paris, who is visiting Washington, on a trip to be "the hives of the world's capitals," expressed the opinion that Washington is "not always the sort of city he expected to find it. It's not quite as grand as he had imagined."

The visitor found Washington to be a city of great beauty and charm, with its magnificent buildings and lovely parks. "But I must say," he continued, "I didn't expect it to be quite so bustling. There are always so many people here, always so much going on."

Despite his initial disappointment, the visitor soon found himself enjoying all that Washington had to offer. He marveled at the diversity of its citizens, the richness of its culture, and the vibrancy of its political life.

The visitor concluded his stay in Washington with a sense of admiration and respect for the city's many contributions to the world. "Washington," he said, "is truly a city of champions."

Tumult and Shouting

For the past few weeks we've been hearing complaints from some people about the noise in the city. The question is, why are we so noisy, and what can we do about it?

The answer is simple: we are noisy because we are a city of people. People are noisy because they are passionate about their lives and their work. People are noisy because they live in a vibrant and exciting city.

But what can we do about it? We can do what we always do: be ourselves. We can continue to be passionate and energetic, and we can continue to live in a city that is full of life. And we can continue to be noisy.

WE SUPPORT PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S ANTI-INFLATION PROGRAM

BUY WISELY WASTE LESS FEED the STARVING

We stand behind President Truman's plan to discourage unreasonable consumer demand and thus halt rising prices. The combination of continued normal consumption at home and heavy shipments abroad is bound to increase prices. If, however, you, as the ultimate consumer, are willing to make some modest sacrifice, to buy more wisely, to waste less, it will tend to reduce inflationary pressure and make possible a more equitable distribution of our supplies among American consumers. We are making a supreme effort to preserve the buying power of your dollar by holding our prices down; we know that President Truman's plan will benefit not only our own people, but is the means of feeding millions of desperate people abroad.
