"‘Walking Women’ Squabble—"

The case of the "walking women" at Bowling Green university has been well-publicized but not well-analyzed.

The controversy centers around a Bowling Green regulation prohibiting women from walking on campus except at certain hours. This regulation has been in effect for several years and has been enforced by the security forces. However, recently some students have complained about the restriction and have accused the university of discrimination.

The university administration has responded by asserting that the regulation is necessary for safety reasons. They argue that the campus is large and that it is safer for students to remain indoors at night.

The opposition to the regulation, however, has argued that it is discriminatory and that it violates the rights of women. They have cited examples of other universities where similar regulations are not enforced.

The issue continues to be debated, with both sides presenting their arguments and evidence. It remains to be seen how the controversy will be resolved.

Dust and Ashes —

It is difficult to imagine anyone enjoying the sun and the sand in the desert, but that is exactly what the students of Bowling Green university are doing this week. They have taken advantage of the warm weather and have hit the beaches.

Some students have gone as far as to say that they prefer the desert to the university, despite the dryness and the heat. They argue that it is a better place to relax and escape the pressures of college life.

Others, however, have expressed concern about the potential damage to their health. They worry that the sun and the wind could be harmful to their skin and their eyes.

The university administration has issued warnings about the dangers of spending too much time in the desert. They have advised students to wear sunscreen and to stay hydrated.

You Can’t Win —

The weather forecast has been reaching deep into the hot and muggy summer months. It looks as though there’s no way out of the heat.

The students of Bowling Green university are feeling the effects of the heat and humidity, with many choosing to stay indoors or to seek out the air conditioning. Some have even started to miss the cooler temperatures of the winter.

The weather forecast continues to predict hot and muggy conditions for the foreseeable future. It is hoped that a break in the heat will come soon, but for now, the students are left to adapt to the conditions as best as they can.

Wandering Church Bell's Fate Unknown

By ROB HENREY

A ceremony last night in downtown Des Moines brought the church bell back to its rightful place in the tower of the old First Presbyterian Church.

The bell was stolen from the church in November 1888 and has been missing ever since.

The bell was found in the basement of a building on the corner of 10th and Walnut streets last week.

The bell was returned to the church yesterday afternoon and will be placed back in the tower today.

The bell was cast in 1868 by the New York Bell Foundry and is made of bronze.

It is 4 feet 6 inches tall and weighs 1,200 pounds.

The bell is inscribed with the words "To the Glory of God and the Honor of the Church."

Faske's Running Sparks Practice

Joe's Hawkeyes ran through four full days of work at practice this week in preparation for their next game against Northwestern tomorrow.

Just as will replace the 30-year-old manager, John Paul, with Joe's 20-year-old manager, John Paul.

"It's a boost for the team," Joe said. "I'm glad to see Joe taking the job," John Paul said.

Northwestern's game is the first of the season for the Hawkeyes. The visitors boast a 5-2 record and are riding a three-game winning streak.

Airing the First Division

Airing the First Division is the theme of the next game as the Hawkeyes face the high-scoring Northwestern offense.

Northwestern's offense has been on the rise in recent games, scoring an average of 40 points per game.

Joe said the Hawkeyes will need to shut down Northwestern's top scorers, including John Paul and Bill Brown.

The visitors are led by Coach Frank Bates, who has guided the team to a 4-1 record so far this season.

Hawkeyes Beat Michigan

The Hawkeyes defeated Michigan in their last game, 34-20, to move to 5-2 on the season.

The visitors will be looking for a repeat performance against Northwestern.

Coach Bates said, "We're excited to face Northwestern. They're a strong team and we know we'll have our hands full."

Northwestern defeated Iowa last week, 28-21, and will be looking for a win to keep pace with the Hawkeyes.

The game is set for 3:00 p.m. at Kinnick Stadium. Admission is $5 for adults and $2.50 for students.
