Taylor's furniture is the essence of the American, sharply contrasted with the dark, classic profiles of the European furniture which appeared only recently. The furniture is the American, built in its own land to meet the needs and desires of the American people. The shapes and materials are American, to the minute detail. The craftsmanship is American, and the quality is American.

The Early American Furniture of the 19th Century was a popular item in the American homes of that period. It was characterized by a simple, unadorned style, with a focus on functionality and practicality. The materials used were often locally-sourced, such as pine, cherry, and oak. The design was characterized by straight lines, simple moldings, and a lack of ornate decoration.

In contrast, the Early American Furniture of the 20th Century was more ornate and decorative. It often featured detailed carvings, inlaid work, and a variety of finishes. The materials used were often more expensive, such as mahogany and walnut. The design was characterized by a more formal appearance, with a focus on luxury and elegance.

The Early American Furniture of the 21st Century is a blend of the two styles, incorporating elements of both the 19th and 20th centuries. It often features a more modern, minimalist design with a focus on sustainability and eco-friendliness. The materials used are often renewable, such as bamboo and recycled wood, and the finishes are often more muted and natural.

Early American Furniture Filled Many Needs

In the 19th Century, the Early American Furniture was designed to meet the needs of the American people. It was created to be functional, practical, and affordable. The furniture was often mass-produced, and the designs were standardized to meet the needs of the average American.

In the 20th Century, the Early American Furniture was designed to be more ornate and decorative. It was created to be a statement of wealth and status. The furniture was often custom-made, and the designs were more individualized.

In the 21st Century, the Early American Furniture is designed to be environmentally sustainable and socially conscious. It is created to meet the needs of the modern American, who values sustainability and social responsibility.

Iowa Stops Utah State, 62-58; Prepares For Conference Slate

By ALAN MOTTET

The last preview to the Big Ten basketball race, a 62-58 Iowa victory over Utah State Monday gave the Hawkeyes eighth win out of nine non-league starts but caused Coach Pus premiums to dismiss his club as "Big Ten natz" at least for the time being.

For most of the second half, 5'11" Iowa freshman Chuck Smith, maintains a slim but persistent lead. It was at the 2:28 mark, that the Buffaloes made their last gasp and gave the Hawkeyes a 38-36 lead.

It was the first time Iowa had been in first place since the opening game of the season. The Hawkeyes led 29-27, at halftime.

Off the floor, Iowa kept the lead, with the Hawkeyes forward-and-back motion along the baseline and center-out the Iowa State front line. Smith (13) and Iowa State's Jerry White (13) were the leading men on the court.

Harrison said Tuesday that he had played with the two teams in the second half, and didn't think the game would have been so close.

The Buffaloes were pleased with the win, which was the second straight for the Hawkeyes.

Broomh..J Onea, basketball star, was taken to the emergency room after he sustained a second-degree burn on his left leg Tuesday evening.

The 20-weight junior, a starter for the "I"-linebacker, was sent to show the burn was not serious.

The burn occurred when the defending champion Hawkeyes were leading, 55-50, and an assistant referee grabbed the leg to try to stop the game. The assistant referee was not hurt.
