Engineer Flies Czechoslovakia With Train

HOF, Germany (AP) — A Czechoslovakian engineer has been assigned to fly express trains across the border.

TUESDAY, September 24, 1951 - 24 passengers, two Czechs, and a baby had a remarkable journey.

Engineer Frantisek Jirka, who bought these children and two young women who had been captured by the Germans, said the trip was made in three stages.

The crew of the train, including the two women, had to remain with the train.

They didn't have it easy in the beginning.

Most of the thousands of refugees who have been taken from the trains by the Germans, are at risk of being taken away.

Martin said he had reported the incident to the German police

They couldn't have done it without the train, which carried them to safety in Prague.

The locomotive was driven by a Czechoslovakian engineer. The engineer and his passengers gave themselves up to start the journey.

Their journey began at a point near Berlin, a few miles from the border.
Preview of the Future

1950 Census Shows U.S. Is in Change

By ROBERT E. GEIGER

WASHINGTON — Census experts, studying the 1950 census returns, are beginning to get a good peek at what life in the U.S. will be like in the years to come.

Many of the trends that have characterized life in the U.S. over the last few years, such as urbanization, education, and birth and death rates, will affect the future of the country. In this article, we provide an overview of some of the key findings from the 1950 census and what they suggest about the future of the U.S.

1. Continuing increase in population "waves" of babies spaced a few years apart. This trend is likely to continue for several more years.

2. More and more of a trend toward city living, possibly for a few years to come.

3. More people moving into the central parts of cities, and working in cities, but fewer large farms and fewer people on farms.

4. Exclusion of the "baby-boom". The farms are continuing to lose population, and the cities are themselves already holding populations.

5. Birth and death rates. The birth rate will remain high for a few years, with more children being born than in previous years.

6. More old people and more children. This trend is likely to continue for many more years.

7. More marriages, probably more divorce. This trend is likely to continue for many more years.

This preview is based almost entirely upon the 1950 census. Trends of course can be upset by very great historical events such as war or serious depression.

However, Census experts believe that the 1950's will bring some of the greatest changes ever to the U.S. population.

Many experts pointed out that the 1950's brought some of the greatest changes ever to the U.S. population. It is likely that the 1960's will bring many more changes.

Wilson Says Acute Shortage in Steel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The steel shortage was pictured in crisis stages Tuesday afternoon by Alphonse J. W. Wilson, U.S. Steel Corporation president. He warned that unless steps are taken by the government to increase steel production, a serious shortage could develop by the second quarter of 1961.

Two SUU students were awarded $2,000 research fellowships from the U.S. public health service.

5. An increase in schooling. Many more young people are attending college than in previous years.

6. More people moving into the central parts of cities, and working in cities, but fewer large farms and fewer people on farms.

7. Exclusion of the "baby-boom". The farms are continuing to lose population, and the cities are themselves already holding populations.

8. Birth and death rates. The birth rate will remain high for a few years, with more children being born than in previous years.

9. More old people and more children. This trend is likely to continue for many more years.

10. More marriages, probably more divorce. This trend is likely to continue for many more years.

No story of the USAP could be better supplemented than of its globe-girdling efforts, the military air transport service. MATS is an important organization that maintains the consolidation in 1944 of the United States air force's transport services.

MATS operates five types of transports, all in the most remote regions. The planes fly into these most inhospitable regions of the globe. Day in and out-duty, for instance, the big-decked double-deck Boeing C-97 Stratofreighters fly the route from White Wale in Germany, to Westover, field in Massachusetts. Not a passenger or ship has ever been lost.

Besides its big job of carrying freight and passengers for the armed forces, MATS also operates the air-vacuum relay, aerial, and air communication and air defense services, each an important function.

Directing the whole operation is a general staff, in which members of the staff do most of the key planning. MATS and Kuter while Rear Adm. Hugh H. Johnson serves as Vice Commander.

4 U.S. Pacifists
Would Tell Russians
Not to Join Army

PARIS—Four American pacifists, one of them from Iowa, pedaled out of Paris Tuesday, heading their bicycles straight toward the Iron Curtain.

They say they hope to get through the Communist wall to Moscow and talk to young Russians about the virtues of refusing to go into the army.

The four are David Dellinger, 34, a printer from Glen Gardner, N. J.; bookkeeper Ralph Di Gab, 32, from the same town; dairy farm worker Arthur Emery, 26, a quaker from Earlham, Ia.; and Mosshine Ridge, N. J. They say they are pacifists, one of them, Emery— says he is now heading their bicycles straight toward the Iron Curtain.

The four have served prison terms for refusing to register for the draft, and at least one of them—Emery—says he is now refusing to pay taxes which the U. S. would divert for rearmament purposes.

They have applied for visas to Germany, Poland and Russia, but they had received none.

Boy with a Dream

Last Known Survivor
Of Little Big Horn
Fights for His Life

BISMARCK, N. D. — The only living survivor of Custer's Last Stand, who survived the massacre at Little Big Horn 75 years ago because he didn't have a horse, was fighting a new battle for his life here Tuesday.

Ninety-six-year-old Sgt. John Horner, who as a youth wasn't entitled to a horse, was left at the mouth of the Williston river when other foot soldiers when Custer and his men rode out to meet death at the hands of Chief Sitting Bull and his Sioux warriors.

Doctors treating Horner for a "respiratory infection" Tuesday said he was making satisfactory but slow progress. They regarded his illness as serious because of his age but said he was in no immediate danger.

Horner's health has been failing slowly for the past two years and he was unable to accompany a party along the Old Custer Trail earlier this year on the 75th anniversary of the 7th cavalry's departure for Little Big Horn.

Until about two years ago, Horner walked to downtown Bismarck every day to discuss the latest war and political news. But on his 80th birthday last year he commented that news of war no longer held any interest for him.
