Rosenbergs' Fate Lies In White House Hands

WASHINGTON (AP)—The somber Judge Friday refused to point the finger of death at the Rosenbergs, who were convicted of conspiracy to泄露 atomic secrets to the Russian agents.

The President's aids, who are expected to present the President's views on the matter, were among those who have been studying the case. The President, in a statement, said:

"I take this occasion to express my appreciation to the President for the thorough and careful study of the case of the Rosenbergs. The President has been guided by the best interests of the United States in making his decision."

The President added that the case of the Rosenbergs was one of the most difficult cases he had ever faced, and that he had consulted with the Justice Department before making his decision.

He further noted that the Rosenbergs had been given a fair trial, and that the evidence against them was overwhelming.

The President then signed a presidential order releasing the Rosenbergs from prison, and instructed the Attorney General to take all necessary steps to ensure their immediate release.

In a separate statement, the Attorney General said:

"The Rosenbergs have served their time, and it is now time to let them go. The President has made the right decision, and I will do everything in my power to see that it is carried out."
Experts See '53 Opening An Era of Swift Progress

WASHINGTON, D.C.-The Senate Appropriations Committee has approved $700,000 for the construction of a new wing on the University of Washington campus, and $500,000 for the improvement of the existing building. The committee also recommended a $2,000,000 appropriation for the purchase of new equipment. The total amount requested is $9,000,000.

The committee's recommendation is based on the need for additional space on the campus and the importance of the university's role in the national economy. The new wing will provide additional classrooms, laboratories, and offices for the university's expanding student body and faculty. The existing building will be renovated to meet the needs of the university's growing student body.

The committee's recommendation is expected to be considered by the House Appropriations Committee in the near future. The university is hoping for a rapid approval process to ensure that construction can begin as soon as possible.

FBI Gives Tips to Motorists In Drive Against Auto Thefts

WASHINGTON, D.C.-The FBI has released a new report on auto thefts, which it says are on the rise. The report recommends that motorists take steps to prevent their vehicles from being stolen.

The FBI recommends that motorists lock their doors and windows, use a steering wheel lock, and register their vehicles. The agency also urges motorists to use a security system to deter thieves from breaking into their vehicles.

The FBI's report comes as the number of reported auto thefts has increased in recent years. In 2019, the agency said that there were 1,000,000 reported auto thefts in the U.S., an increase of 10% from the previous year.
