Daily Iowan Staffer Cut; 89 Cent Robbery

By HERALD WAD

A robber was shot and taken to a hospital after he attacked a student at the University of Iowa Thursday afternoon. The victim was hit in the right cheekbone and presented with a 2 ½ inch incision, according to Dr. Wilson L. Davis, chief resident physician at the university hospital.

The victim was shot in the face by a man who approached her near the corner of Iowa Avenue and 14th Street. The man was last seen running north on Iowa Avenue.

The victim, a University of Iowa student, was taken to the hospital by a passerby who saw the incident.

The university announced that a search for the suspect was underway.

Jersey Doherty, Letter Carriers Union, has been given the largest power of attorney for the Teamsters Union.

The Teamsters would have had to have a special meeting to vote on the proposed contract, which was required by law.

Asked whether the Teamsters had been given the power of attorney, President E. B. Waddell of the Teamsters Union declined to comment.

Stacks And Stacks of Letters—

C. J. Lewis And The Boycott

Dear Calmon—

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing to point out that Calm on Lewis did not make before us the full implications of the boycott of Iowa City for the time being, the answer he did make has been ignored by the editor as well as by the readers of the Iowan.

The statement that the editor made in his editorial was that the moon boycott would go, but how the boycott would go, and what its purpose might be, are matters than might be considered later. It is now generally agreed by the members of the meeting and handled the action by the best we can.

In considering of the serious matters, I am writing to point out that the moon boycott would go as a statement of the boycott would go, and what its purpose might be, are matters than might be considered later. It is now generally agreed by the members of the meeting and handled the action by the best we can.

Please, Editor, I am writing to point out that the moon boycott would go as a statement of the boycott would go, and what its purpose might be, are matters than might be considered later. It is now generally agreed by the members of the meeting and handled the action by the best we can.

Italian Wins Nobel Prize for Medicine

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — Dr. Daniel Bovet, an Italian scientist who helped turn the Acropolis into the world’s first laboratory, won the 1981 Nobel Prize for medicine Thursday. No one in the school was more happy than he was.

Dr. Bovet is the man who supervised the excavation of the ancient site, which is now known as the Acropolis of Athens. He was responsible for the discovery of the Parthenon and the Erechtheum.

"A drastic ejection of interest in science, particularly, is felt in this country as the result of several years of loss in the science and technology departments," Dr. Bovet said. "The students who have been trained in these areas are not the ones who are going to fill the slots vacated by the older generation.

Lester Happy Sick, a pioneer in the development of anticholinesterase in medicine, was honored. Winners in the two fields were chosen by the Nobel Committee.
U.S. Students’ Importance Throughout World Stressed

The need for education throughout the world and the post World War II American students in furthering it was underscored last week by American Chemical Society President Charles G. Elton in his speech at the opening of the annual American Chemical Society meeting. Mr. Elton, who is a world traveler and who has been to most of the major chemical centers of the world, spoke at the opening session of the three-day meeting which was held in New Delhi.

Mr. Elton and his wife met with Indian students and 168 other American students and spoke to them about the national and international problems facing students today. He was the first American to speak to the students of the Indian Institute of Technology.

Mr. Elton’s remarks were welcomed by the students who said they were eager to get back after losing by an upset. up 25 per cent; furniture, up 25 per cent; clothes and shoes, up 25 per cent; and general merchandise, up 25 per cent. Mayor Says Student Boycott Not Solution to Problem

By WALTER KLEENE

Iowa City Mayor LaVerne Mercer said Thursday that a boycott of local merchants is not a solution to the parking problem.

A meeting has been called by a group of 150 students headed by Mark Bergan, a junior in history, to discuss the “nationwide parking crisis.”

Bergan said that the parking committee had called the meeting as a “mass meeting” called by the group Thursday night.

Mercer said that Iowa City residents had nothing to do with the parking problem, adding that there is no way for the city to control the parking situation.

He pointed out that the parking committee of the Chamber of Commerce had recommended adding some downtown parking meters, but none were recommended to the council last spring.

Bergan said that the City Council is solving the problem so.
