The New Red China Policy—

Chiang Kai-shek Is Worried

--- By J. M. Roberts

If Chiang Kai-shek had reasons to worry Tuesday, the discoveries of his Hsiao Dong's latest work is probably the reason for his current concern. The recent edition of his December 1962 book, "The New Red China Policy—Chiang Kai-shek Is Worried," was originally published by the Chinese Red Army and has been praised as a masterpiece of modern Chinese literature.

The book is a collection of short stories, each dealing with a different aspect of Chiang's rule over China. The stories are filled with political intrigue, personal trials, and the struggle for freedom.

Excerpts from the Book:

"The Chinese Red Army has been able to gain control of most of China, and Chiang's regime is crumbling under the weight of its own internal problems."

"Chiang is known for his harsh treatment of his enemies, but his own family members are beginning to question his leadership."

"The book is a powerful reminder of the challenges faced by Chiang in his fight for power."

SAN FRANCISCO — Mrs. D. B. Oakes, widow of the late Iowa-bred artist D. B. Oakes, has presented to San Francisco the world's largest bust — a 5,000-pound, 18-foot-tall statue of the late President Abraham Lincoln. This is the second time Mrs. Oakes has given to San Francisco. The first was a 3,000-pound, 12-foot-tall statue of the late President George Washington, which was given to the city in 1955.

The statue, which is made of bronze and stands in the center of the Forum, was presented to the city in 1957. Mrs. Oakes, who is the daughter of the late Iowa-bred artist D. B. Oakes, said she was inspired to give the statue to San Francisco because of the city's fine art collection.

A youthful, but often surprising, Air Force Academy football team will open the first phase of its 1958 campaign Wednesday afternoon against the University of Colorado. The Cadets, on the other hand, will try to show up as a first-rate side after their opening game of last Saturday against New Mexico State.

The Cadets have developed a good game of running and are expected to do well, with some more近几年 for the run. The placekicker situation is better, also.

Matt May, a senior, will be used.
