Fidel Castro Steps Down As Premier

Havana, May 19 - Fidel Castro announced today that he would resign as premier of Cuba Friday night according to President Jimmy Carter. The announcement came late Saturday night at a national conference of the ruling Communist Party, which named Vice President Miguel Teran to replace Castro.

The news was not a shock. Castro had hinted at stepping down in the past, most recently in March, when he visited the United States for medical treatment. But the announcement was still a surprise to many Cubans, who had come to accept Castro as a permanent fixture.

The move is likely to have significant implications for Cuba's economy, politics, and international relations. Castro has been a vocal critic of the United States, and his departure could lead to changes in the country's foreign policy. It also remains to be seen how the new premier, Teran, will handle the challenges facing the government.
