Nation To Get Basic Facts In Steel Fight

Hope Figures Ease Dispute, Says Mitchell

Date To Cover Wages, Profits

WASHINGTON (AP) -- President Eisenhower decided Tuesday to ask the nation to submit to the government the basic facts about the steel strike.

Secretary of Labor James B. Mitchell announced the decision after a 24-hour discussion with the strike leaders.

"We have a result of those discussions," Mitchell said after he and the strike leaders met. "We have that the government will bring a little harder at each other, a little less hard at the industry." Mitchell said he would set the strike for Tuesday.

The strike began Monday when the United Steelworkers of America and the new owners of Bethlehem Steel Corp. met deadlock on a wage and profit-sharing proposal.

The government said it would take over the strike by the end of the day. The government said it would take over the strike by the end of the day. SUI's Data Reduction Center—

Decodes And Interprets Messages From Outer Space

Channels Recorded

(1) The separate channels are recorded on seemingly endless strips of paper here issuing from the machine.

Tapes Unpacked

(1) The SUI Department of Physics under the direction of Dr. James Van Allen, has one of the top data reduction centers in the world. This center is used to decode and interpret the messages sent from outer space. Messages are fed into the Data Reduction Center at 2:15 p.m. and are loaded into a machine which then sends the information to the Daily Iowan's editorial office. Therefore, it is not an expression of SUI's administration or opinion in any particular.

Tapes Decoded

Tapes are loaded into a machine which plays them back and decodes each separate channel of information.

Tapes Identified

(1) The tapes are then marked with the place and time. That is, the position of the satellite at a particular time. Shown recording the data is Mrs. Betty Clendening, a student wife from Los Angeles.

Profile Drawn

The figures are recorded on a profile of the earth's atmosphere at the exact point at which they were recorded. The curve is in this plate, for instance, in part of South America over which the satellite passed. Edward Van Allen is shown plotting the satellite's height and radiation intensity recorded at that particular point.

Radiation Readings Taken

When the figures have been plotted and a daily complete data sheet has been reached, one of the mathematicians, such as Carl Michelson, shown above, takes readings from the graph. He attempts to formulate the patterns of radiation and to determine the earth's gravitational pull at a particular point in space.
