Sour Independents
To The Editor:
It is very easy for one to attack with malice and ill will any group, political or otherwise, that one disagrees with. This is not always wrong, but one should be careful in using words that could seriously harm a group. If one is really working toward what one believes in, one should not be attacking other groups. This is a problem in today's society, and it is one that we must all work toward solving.

Ghandi
To the Editor:
As Ghandi himself would tell you, it is important to understand the type of person one is trying to reach. Ghandi was a simple man, but he was also a powerful orator. He knew how to use his words in a way that would make people think. I believe that we can learn from Ghandi's methods and apply them to our own situations.

The Man Who Thinks for Himself Knows

Hutchins, You Dreamer You

Editor's Note: The following report, which appeared in the Sept. 15, 1937 issue of The Daily Illini, is historically significant as it showcases the early critiques of modernist architecture and how they influenced the debate on the future of the University of Illinois Campus. The article by Robert M. Hutchins highlights the importance of maintaining a balance between tradition and innovation in architectural planning.

Hutchins, You Dreamer You

BY ROBERT M. HUTCHINS

President, Univ. of Illinois

I have thought that instead of presenting an article of my own, I should refer to one that Dr. Robert M. Hutchins has presented at the University of Illinois Campus, which will be in the morning.

The subject of the article is the future of the University of Illinois Campus and the architectural planning that is taking place in other states and universities.

The article begins with the statement that the University of Illinois Campus is undergoing a major transformation, with new buildings and facilities being constructed.

The author argues that the new buildings should be designed to reflect the traditions and values of the University, rather than simply following the latest trends in architecture.

The article also discusses the importance of involving the students in the planning process, as they will be the ones to occupy and use the new buildings.

The author concludes by urging the readers to consider the future of the University of Illinois Campus and to think about the kind of campus that they want to see in the years to come.

The article ends with the statement that the future of the University of Illinois Campus is in the hands of the students and that they should take an active role in shaping its future.

Herter Sees Policy Shift
Between Reds

WASHINGTON -- Secretary of State Christian A. Herter and the Soviet Union's foreign minister, Andrei Gromyko, seemed well on their way to some kind of understanding in their meeting here yesterday. The stage was set for a new round of negotiations after the two men agreed to resume talks.

Washington observers, however, believe that the meeting was really a kind of honeymoon before the real bargaining begins. They say that the United States and the Soviet Union are both aware that they cannot afford a confrontation.

Herter and Gromyko met for nearly three hours here yesterday. They discussed matters ranging from the Middle East to the present role of China in world affairs. The two men agreed to continue their own personal efforts to get the United Nations back to work.

On the question of the Middle East, the two men seemed to agree that they would try to keep the situation there from getting out of hand. Both men expressed concern over the possibility of a military clash between Israel and Egypt, and both agreed to try to prevent such a clash.

On the question of China, the two men seemed to agree that they would try to prevent the situation in that area from getting out of hand. Both men expressed concern over the possibility of a military clash with China, and both agreed to try to prevent such a clash.
