U.S. Offers Compromise on U.N. Head

Knight Reveals Name Of Nixon's Emissary

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — President Richard Nixon will receive some kind of answer Tuesday as to his request that Sen. Edward Kennedy switch his vote on the landmark Voting Rights Bill — but the outcome of the crucial Senate test vote is far from certain.

Nixon's emissary, Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr., D-Va., arrived here Monday morning, the Louisville Courier-Journal reported. The newspaper said Byrd is the man Nixon would send to the South if he wanted someone to change his vote at the last minute.

The White House had neither confirmed nor denied the story, but sources in the Kennedy Senate office said Byrd had been in Washington for an extended period.

Byrd was one of Nixon's top aides during the 1960 presidential campaign, and the Louisville newspaper noted that Byrd's Southern background and his voting record on civil rights and social issues would make him a fitting emissary.

The Voting Rights Bill, which would extend federal oversight of state elections in areas with a history of discrimination, has been a key issue in the Senate. The Kennedy-Southern Democrats have been key to its passage, and Byrd's presence suggests Nixon is seeking to influence their votes.

There is no indication that Byrd has been able to change the minds of senators who have already announced their support for the bill. However, his presence could still have an impact on the final vote count.

Other factors that could influence the outcome include the potential for a filibuster, the possibility of a Senate rule change, and the potential for changes in the bill itself.

The Voting Rights Bill is considered a key element of Nixon's domestic agenda, and a successful vote would be a significant win for the White House. However, it is likely to be a closely watched and closely fought battle in the Senate.
Highly Commendable, Yet Only a Beginning

Wednesday, 12 Negro students entered front gate in all-black school in Memphis, Tenn., a city where historically only segregated schools stood.

The move was made with little resistance and cost after the school board prepared for it in quickly-complete secrecy.

The integration marked another Southern city's entry into a program of at least token integration—a program which has been a long time coming in the South. Dallas and Atlanta took similar steps this year, with much the same quiet success. And now the people in Memphis, a city where the "Southwest Association of Southern Cities," apparently have accepted integration too.

It is highly commendable that each quiet integration took place. These moves cannot certainly serve as encouraging examples for other cities which previously believed school integration could not come without violence.

The Memphis, Dallas, Atlanta moves are examples of great importance, but, equally important is that once integration begins is three or other cities, it must most certainly continue.

It is obvious that the steps taken in all three communities have been only a beginning, only a beginning. They can, not, under any circumstances, serve as an end in itself.

Little Rock, Ark., whose integration was established at Central High only after much violence and struggle, has continued its integration program. Nearly 60 Negro students began their school year last September. And the school year is high school this year. Integration begins with more fury. Now it continues literally advance.

Just as Dallas,Atlanta,Memphis,show that such integration can be accomplished peacefully, Little Rock,Ark.,shows that integration, once begun on a small scale, can successfully advance to a larger scale.

Little Rock's goal is one which should be followed as culpably as possible. Token integration may be the first step, but complete integration must be the final goal.

Rewards for All

Even though it took a season eight college league and even though on attaining ticket sales it simply was the consensus, Roger Maris' total of 61 home runs will rank as insofar as exclusive sport. His position to win the Rookie of the Year, Boston's Ted Williams was both appropriate to sportsmanship and fitting in the light of superior sales the Red Sox in other departments during his own record season.

The peaking of strength on athletes more than a guarantee in after time is always relative. Relative performances on the part of Mickey Mantle is a safe area for judgment. And after the necessary scores which secured home run 30, it was measuring to use this counterbalanced mildly by the fact that he had ever done so before. In Baltimore previously, the customers who gained MaLett and throughout gave him to himself, he reacted on two new bases, turned down two World Series triples and refused a flat $35,000. "It felt this way," he was explained. Marvelously. "This is the way to beat the ball. He wanted the ball to cash in appropriately.

Home run is ball No. 50. It was out of the new fragment of, the New York Giants' most popular to national publicity. But Sadie Dunn of Knoxville took this exactly as an unreported bonus. "If I want to do," he said, "I'm the ball to Maris"

It was a triumph for patience. It had earned his record. Bell 59 takes on altogether. Maris' accuracy on sufficient. All beautiful tastes to benefit from superior public interest.

And the man who has the pitcher was an extra dedication surprising for any year 30 home runs. A fan, with the 5,000 in the book. A pair of waariance passes to all the Yankee games at home next season.

Nelson, Novak Are Elected Iowa Basketball Co-Captains
By ROB HANSEN
Staff Writer
In a surprise move, Don Nelson and Joe Novak have been elected co-captains for the 1961-62 Hawkeye basketball season. The veteran Nelson and Novak were chosen by a popular vote of the Iowa regulars.

The announcement was made by Iowa Coach B. J. Schon, who consulted with the members of the 1961-62 basketball squad as to the selection of the Quads-Quin Quarterly's basketball Co-Captains. The decision was then submitted to the voting regulars, who decided in favor of Nelson and Novak.

Nelson has also been elected to the panel for the 1961-62 basketball season. Nelson and Novak have both been inarguably the most valuable players for the last two years and they have set standards for all others to follow. This year, however, they will be joined by two other exceptionally fine players, who have the potential for setting new marks in the Hawkeye annals.
