Can Sullivan Really Do Houdini Act?

By JUDY MACK WEISZ

If you can imagine a Houdini-like escape act - and a jacket-patched-to-stone of iron - then you've got a sense of what Russell Sullivan is trying to do.

For Sullivan, 1961 is the year in which he faces the biggest challenge of his career - the biggest challenge a problem has ever presented.

In a race of the fastest minds in the world, the 42-year-old Sullivan, director of ADAP (Anti-Deuterium Association of Professional Scientists), is about to lay bare his academic credentials and show the world what he's made of.

The former nuclear physicist, who has worked on both sides of the Iron Curtain, is about to make a dramatic statement that could change the course of history.

The story of how Sullivan came to be in this position is as fascinating as it is complex.

Sullivan was born in 1919 in New York City to a family of scientists.

His father, a physicist, was a pioneer in the field of nuclear energy, and his mother, a chemist, was a research associate at Columbia University.

As a child, Sullivan was fascinated by the possibilities of science, and he spent much of his time in the library, reading about the latest discoveries.

He attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he earned a degree in physics.

After graduation, Sullivan began working for several government agencies, including the Atomic Energy Commission, where he became involved in the development of nuclear weapons.

In 1954, Sullivan was recruited by a group of scientists to join ADAP, an organization dedicated to the prevention of nuclear war.

Sullivan has been with ADAP ever since, and he has become one of its most outspoken members.

Sullivan's career has been marked by a series of dramatic events.

In 1960, he was arrested for treason and espionage, but he was quickly released after he agreed to cooperate with the government.

Since then, Sullivan has continued to work on behalf of ADAP, speaking out against the dangers of nuclear war.

Sullivan is now preparing for his most challenging assignment yet - a speech to the United Nations.

He has been invited to speak at the general assembly of the UN, and he will be expected to present a solution to the world's nuclear crisis.

Sullivan is under no illusions about the difficulty of the task.

"I know it's going to be tough," he says. "But I have to do it for the sake of humanity."

Sullivan is confident that his speech will be well received, but he is also aware of the potential dangers.

"I know there are those who will try to discredit me," he says. "But I won't let that stop me."

Sullivan is hoping that his efforts will inspire others to take action.

"If I can change one person's mind," he says, "I'll be happy."

Sullivan is a man of great determination and courage.

He is willing to risk everything to prevent nuclear war.

He is a true hero, and his story is a testament to the power of the human spirit.

Sullivan's speech is scheduled for September 20, 1961, at the United Nations headquarters in New York City.

It will be a historic moment, and Sullivan is ready to face the challenge.

"I'm ready," he says. "I've been training for this my whole life."

Sullivan is truly a man of his time, and his story is a source of inspiration for us all.

Onward and upward!

For readers interested in reading more about Russell Sullivan, a collection of his speeches and writings can be found in the forthcoming book, "The Man Who Slept With the Bomb."

Lake Forest, Alpha Phi - Explanation Needed Here

To the Editor:

This fall, as at other times, the United States is facing a crisis on the SSC campus. In many other colleges, it is common for students to read the SSC community guidelines and if they don't, then they are considered to be in violation. However, at Lake Forest College, this is not the case. The students need to be made aware of the rules and regulations that govern the behavior of students on campus.

Call: Green Bay's
Title Hopes Sag

GREEN BAY, Wis.—The Army dealt the Green Bay Packers' National Football League title hopes a hard blow Tuesday by calling up running back Paul Hornung and defensive end Dave Nitschke, who both have played a key role in the Packers' uphill climb to the championship.

Although both Hornung and Nitschke were expected to be called up, their presence in the Army was a shock to the Packers, who have been trying to scrape by without key players for much of the season.

Coach Vince Lombardi called the Army call-up a "crude" move, but he noted that Hornung and Nitschke were "very, very few weeks away" from returning to the team.

The 14th Army Corps headquarters here is Harrold전 Seminarum 10.

Richfer-Miller Duo Named Back of The Week

By JERRY ELISA
Sports Editor

There is an old saying that for every good thing that comes along there is something bad to go with it. The proverb, while applied in football ("what ails one, remains with the other") never seems to be more true than when the player of the week is named from the same team.

Benjamin, December 3, 1972—The Richter brothers, the best backfield in the nation and the dominant duo at the University of Wisconsin, have been named the All-American Backfield Trio of the Week by the Associated Press.

Both are seniors and will be eligible for the Heisman Trophy when the votes are submitted next month. Richter, who has been named to the All-American team four times, is the first player ever to be named to the All-American team four times in a row.

There is no evidence of any wrongdoing on the part of the Wildcats. However, it is believed that they may have accepted some money from a sports agent in order to help them get a job after they graduate.

A fine opportunity for future students to learn about the nature of sports and the importance of ethics in sports. It is hoped that this article will help to raise awareness about the importance of ethical behavior in sports.
