Opinions Vary on Clemson-Slu Game

By GARY SPURLOCK

There seems to be a divide among fans of the two teams. Some fans of Clemson are slamming the game, saying it's a "rip-off," while other fans of LSU are saying it's a game that should be played.

"I don't think we should have to buy $70 tickets to see a game," said one LSU fan. "They're just taking advantage of us." He added that he would rather see his team play a game against a team that he feels is more worthy of the money he's paying.

"I think the game is important for both teams," said a Clemson fan. "It's a chance for us to show the country what we can do. We have a lot of talent on our team and we need to prove it." He went on to say that he thinks the game is a great opportunity for both teams to make a statement.

The game itself is a clash of two powerful teams. LSU, the defending national champions, is facing off against Clemson, who is looking to make a run for the championship this year. The game is being held in New Orleans, Louisiana, and is expected to draw a large crowd.

The game is expected to start at 3:30 p.m. and will be aired on ESPN. Fans are encouraged to arrive early to ensure they have a seat.

"I can't wait to see this game," said one fan. "I have been waiting for this moment for years and I'm not going to miss it." He added that he would rather see this game than any other game on his schedule.

The Guns Are Silent—But the Dragon's Awake

By MOHAMMAD IDRISS

Right now the guns are silent on China's Hainan Island. The tides of war are going out, and it seems to me the most important front line is in the northwestern and northeastern fringes of the Chinese empire—where war is raging against a massive enemy of its own. Indeed, much of the strength of the Chinese is to be found in the northwestern and northeastern fringes of their empire, where the Chinese are waging a desperate struggle against the forces that have been arrayed against them.

The North Chinese Front, as it is now known, has been under constant attack for many years by the Soviet Union. The Chinese are fighting a desperate struggle to keep their borders intact. The Soviet Union has been lobbing shells into China at will, and the Chinese are fighting back with all the resources at their disposal.

The Chinese are determined to keep their borders intact, and they are fighting a desperate struggle to do so. Hawkeyes Fall To St. Louis, 65-58

Iowa Holds Small Halftime Lead; Faltlers in Clutch

By ERIC ZIEGLER

St. LOUIS, Mo. — What started out as a tight defensive battle turned into a basketball nightmare for the Iowa Hawkeyes Monday night as they fell behind the St. Louis Billikens and were edged by Donnell Reid, 65-58.

Paired by Jimmy Rodgers, the Hawkeyes opened with a tightly contested first half, taking a 32-30 lead. But with the Billikens running up a steep lead in the second half, they rallied for five straight points to pull back within three, but the Hawkeyes were unable to close the gap despite a last chance to tie with 1:01 remaining.

Throughout the contest, Coach Sharee Montgomery relied on a core group, including Bob Hinson, Greg Johnson and Mike Pollard, to pull off the win. However, as time ran out on the second half, the Hawkeyes scored just 15 points and fell behind.

For the Billikens, Reid was the key to their win, scoring 20 points and 12 rebounds. Although he had a slow start, he found his rhythm in the second half and scored 11 of his 20 points in the final 10 minutes.

SUI Professors Disagree On U.S. Cuban Crisis Acts

Panel Members Question U.S., Russian Positions

By YOHANNES KIPKE

Several of the SUI professors who participated in the American Association of University Professors' meeting in New Orleans in December have expressed concern about the current U.S. policies toward Cuba. The professors, including Dr. D. N. Naidoo, associate professor of international relations, and Dr. A. K. Samadi, assistant professor of political science, have questioned the adequacy of the U.S. government's response to the Cuban crisis.

During the meeting, Dr. Naidoo discussed the effectiveness of current policies and the potential for a negotiated solution. He argued that the U.S. approach is too confrontational and may escalate tensions. Dr. Samadi emphasized the importance of understanding the perspective of the Cuban people and the need for dialogue to resolve the crisis.

The professors also pointed out that the Cuban government is not monolithic and that there are different segments within the society that can be influenced by positive actions. They suggested that the U.S. should focus on improving the everyday lives of Cubans and demonstrating the benefits of free-market economic reforms, rather than imposing sanctions.

Foreign Student Author Dellork Miller, who sometimes reports from women's clubs or on political events in Moscow, told a panel discussion on U.S. foreign policy to avoid the impression of being a "danger to the Republic." Miller expressed concern about the recent protests and the potential for violence. Miller said that the U.S. government should be more transparent in its dealings with the Cuban government and should avoid making unilateral decisions that could exacerbate the situation.

Supreme Court Justice Daniel Breyer, senior justice in the United States, noted the complexities of the situation and the need for a diplomatic solution. Breyer argued that the U.S. should work with the international community to find a peaceful resolution and avoid military intervention.

The professors expressed their disappointment with the current U.S. policy and urged for a more constructive approach to the crisis. They called for a dialogue with the Cuban government and the Cuban people to find a solution that is acceptable to all parties.

Professors Discuss Aspects Of Foreign Student Program

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American Society of Civil Engineers (ASCE) has expressed concern about the impact of recently announced foreign student visa policies on the U.S. engineering education system. The ASCE said that the policies are likely to result in a decrease in the number of foreign students, which could have a significant impact on the quality of engineering education.

The ASCE president, Dr. John W. Graff, expressed concern about the potential for a decrease in the number of foreign students and the impact this could have on the U.S. engineering workforce. Graff said that the policies are likely to result in a decrease in the number of foreign students, which could have a significant impact on the quality of engineering education.

The ASCE emphasized the importance of diversity in engineering education and the need for a more inclusive approach to international student recruitment. The ASCE called for a renewed focus on the benefits of international student recruitment and the need to maintain a diverse student body.
