The Ashes of Triumph

In his press conference of Jan. 16 before he had become President, Mr. de Gaulle stressed the importance of the Common Market, French President Charles de Gaulle said, "The position is to have in Europe the German at our own pace, the French at our own pace... within a state that is truly common, to get on top of our enemies, consider as well and end the connection the community has made with (European Free Trade Association partners). That is the one at issue... Otherwise, Berlusconi can answer it.*" Developmentists in the hot few days point up clearly that this question is not the only question at issue and the De Gaulle has no activities of letting anyone but himself answer the questions.

The big question that goes beyond any one nation's entrance into the Common Market involves the future of the Atlantic Alliance. De Gaulle, who has often been alone but right, now seems to be alone and completely wrong. His demonstration to the French a week before the European Parliament's dominant power in Europe has clearly shaken the public and military foundations of the Western Alliance. It is doubtful that he can reshape the Alliance he dreams of with (France at the rim), but it seems ever-doubtful that he'll accept a compromise which would help save the Atlantic Alliance in the near future.

The latest move is a grand diplomatic triumph for the French President, but the danger now is to take too much of it. It may appear that the French-Friendly leadership was, which would be the basis for Franco-German dominance of the Common Market, might be hit by the Roule Parliament when it comes up for ratification.

The Parents Cooperative Preschool, 104 E. Market, is the subject of this feature as the members of the parents cooperative in attendance at the Parents Cooperative Preschool, 104 E. Market, Iowa City.

The cooperative is a non-profit organization of dedicated parents and teachers who work together to provide a child-centered program for children ages 3-5. The school is open Monday through Friday, 9:00-11:30 AM and 1:00-3:30 PM, and is run by a volunteer committee of parents and teachers.

Parents are actively involved in the day-to-day operations of the school, serving on the board of directors, assisting in the classrooms, and contributing to the financial support of the school through volunteer work and fundraising activities.

The school is open to children of all ages, and offers a variety of activities including arts and crafts, music, and outdoor play. The school's mission is to provide a nurturing, safe, and stimulating environment for children to learn and grow.

The Parents Cooperative Preschool is a great example of how parents and teachers can come together to create a high-quality, affordable preschool program for young children.

Of Loyola's Ramblers

Who knew the veteran center of Loyola's basketball team had the explosion of a 100-yard dasher?

Dick Smith, the Iowan who is setting the tempo of the basketball team, is the most explosive man on the team. As far as an athletic standpoint is concerned, Dick Smith, 6 feet 7 inches, 250 pounds, is practically unapproachable.

Dick usually starts out running. Dick begins his move before he receives the ball. Dick has a very short step, and he usually gets past his defensive man before his ears hit the hash mark. Dick likes to run the open pass. He knows the defense will not be able to stop him if he gets past one man.

He Usually Weighs 150 —

Toughest Job for Parker: Battling Old Man Weight

The 1963 season proved to be a banner year for Minnesota's Big Ten champion wrestler, and his home town took notice. For the first time in his career, he weighed in at 150 pounds for the season opener against Washington on September 2. He was unable to wrestle at 126 pounds in the dual meet that followed, and this proved to be a problem for him in his early matches.

He entered the weight class at 150 pounds, or to wrestle at the 150-lb. class, to have to be down to some 150 pounds," he explained. So the problem has been to weigh to his diet so as to be more of a high school wrestler and be able to compete with wrestling-heavy methods commonly among wrestlers.

The 150-lb. weight class is desirable for a perfect wrestler, and Parker admitted that he was more of a high school wrestler. In the dual meet with the Fighting Irish, he weighed in at 150 pounds.

"In the dual meet with the Fighting Irish, he weighed in at 150 pounds. He was able to wrestle at 126 pounds in the dual meet that followed, and this proved to be a problem for him in his early matches." Parker developed a wacky way to a 200-pound weight to defend his title. But he explains, "I don't care if I weigh 200 pounds to defend my title.

"I think we have the greatest chance to make good in our weight class. Prior to the conference meet, Parker had compiled a 16 dual meet record.

Parker may have an even bigger challenge to come. March 16th, Saturday, there will be a 150-pound division to defend his title. It's the weight challenge again, and he has met in at least seven meets.

Despite defeats by the powerful Oklahoma, Parker feels that he has a good chance to defend his Big Ten title. "Last year we had some close meets and the same will be true in our final six. We have four meets at Northwestern, Michigan State and Illinois and one with Ohio State," Parker said.

"We're not sure about the记录. We have some teams which will help us to win the Big Ten title and a regular job but I do not care if I weigh 200 pounds to defend my title. Explorer I, SUI-Made Geiger Tube To Celebrate Fifth Birthday Today

America's first earth satellite, Explorer I, five years old today. It ushered the United States into the space race June 1, 1958, from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

The dioxide, 20-pound, which did much to beke the satellite's career in the face of dismissive Soviet skepticism in 1957, continues a solitary, long-distance Geiger tube from Iowa.

The instrument, a product of the Department of Physics and Astronomy at SUI, aided the initial work of placing the breakers in an ionizing rain in space. The technician behind the tiny experiment was Dr. Robert Proctor of the Department of Astronomy.

Dr. Proctor, who headed the Dr. Proctor's group, was recognized as the first to develop a sensitive tube for detecting cosmic rays. He is a member of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers and the American Physical Society.

Since January, 1956, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has been monitoring the tube's performance from Cape Canaveral. Proctor has been monitoring the tube's performance from Cape Canaveral.

A new cold wave swept across

France, Tuesday, leaving cars in the laps of drivers in every major city, according to reports from Paris. The weather turned frigid, with temperatures dropping to below freezing in many areas. The cold front, which originated in Siberia, moved swiftly across the country, causing chaos for many drivers. The French government declared a state of emergency in several regions, calling for immediate action to prevent accidents and ensure the safety of citizens. The wave also affected transportation, with delays reported on major roads and airports.

Macmillan Still Hopeful—

Britain, Allies Fight Veto

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Harold Macmillan’s government expressed optimism Wednesday in predicting Britain’s European Common Market bid would succeed. The minister said the negotiations would continue, and that Britain would try to reach an agreement as soon as possible. The government also announced plans to strengthen the economy, with the aim of reducing the budget deficit and increasing employment. However, the bid was met with resistance from some European countries, including France, which threatened to veto the proposal. The British government was confident in its ability to negotiate a favorable deal, and hoped to secure a mandate from the European Council later in the month.

New Storms Hit Europe

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The world-renowned British and American film industry faced another major challenge on Saturday, as new storms hit Europe. The storms, which originated in the Mediterranean Sea, moved rapidly across the continent, causing widespread damage and disruption. The British government announced plans to coordinate a relief effort, and called for international assistance to aid the affected countries. The storms caused significant flooding in many areas, with reports of up to 50 centimeters of rainfall in some regions. The disaster also affected transportation, with roads and airports closed in many areas. The British government urged citizens to stay safe and avoid unnecessary travel.
