To the Editor:

Would you be surprised to find that President Eisenhower has not spoken out in any degree regarding the current controversy over the role of the churches in our society? The most recent major statement on this subject was made in late March by the Speaker of the House, Representative J. B. Anderson. In his opening remarks to the House, he emphasized the importance of separating church and state. He said that the role of the churches in our society should be determined by the individual conscience of each person, and that the government should not interfere with that conscience. He also stated that the separation of church and state is essential to the survival of our democratic society.

The separation of church and state is an issue that has been debated for centuries. It was first enunciated in the United States in the 18th century, with the Founding Fathers' adoption of the First Amendment to the Constitution. This amendment guarantees the freedom of religion and prohibits the establishment of any religion by the government. It has been a cornerstone of American democracy ever since.

In recent years, however, there has been a growing movement to challenge the separation of church and state. This movement has been fueled by a variety of factors, including the rise of religious fundamentalism, the growing influence of religious institutions in public life, and the increasing role of religion in political decision-making.

This movement has taken many forms. One of the most visible forms has been the introduction of prayer in public schools. In recent years, a number of states have required students to recite a prayer or to participate in a moment of silence before the beginning of each school day. This has sparked a great deal of controversy, with some arguing that it is a violation of the separation of church and state and others arguing that it is an important way to promote moral values.

Another form of this movement has been the introduction of religious education in public schools. In some states, students are offered courses on religion as an option, or even as a requirement, as part of their regular curriculum. Again, this has sparked a great deal of controversy, with some arguing that it is an important way to promote religious education and others arguing that it is a violation of the separation of church and state.

The separation of church and state is a complex and delicate issue. It is important that we continue to debate it, and that we consider the arguments of both sides carefully. Ultimately, however, it is up to each of us to determine our own beliefs and to live our lives according to those beliefs, without interference from the government. Only then can we truly achieve the freedom and dignity that our founders so eloquently envisioned.

The issue of the role of the churches in our society is one that we must continue to grapple with. It is a complex issue, with no easy answers. But it is an issue that is critically important to the survival of our democratic society. We must continue to debate it, and to consider the arguments of both sides carefully. Ultimately, however, it is up to each of us to determine our own beliefs and to live our lives according to those beliefs, without interference from the government. Only then can we truly achieve the freedom and dignity that our founders so eloquently envisioned.
Music Prof Wins Award

Phyllis B. Koons, professor of music at the University of Iowa, has won a publication award for a piece which she wrote in 1963. The award was given by the National Society for the Music of Children and Young People at its autumn meeting in Philadelphia, which was attended by music teachers and students from 12 states and Canada. The society, which is sponsored by the Rotary Assembly Council of the United Nations, offers the award to recognize compositions written by composers under the age of 30 for the developing child. The award consists of a $500 prize and a silver plate. Koons' composition was selected from 40 entries from 11 states and Canada. The society has given the award 13 times since 1956. Previous winners include John Adams, John Cage, and Ugo Fedeli. The society hopes to increase the number of entries in the future and to encourage more young composers to enter their works.

$452,000 Deposit
City's Last Step In Land Acquisition

Oklahoma City, Okla., has made a deposit of $452,000 to secure the purchase of a 21-acre tract of land for a new stadium. The deposit, which is required by the Federal Housing Administration, was made by the City's Land Bank. The land is located near the current location of the stadium, which was built in 1940. The new stadium will be used for baseball and football games and will be open to the public. The City's Land Bank has been working on the project for several years and has already spent more than $1 million on preliminary work. The City hopes to complete the stadium construction by 1972 and to have it ready for use in time for the 1973 baseball season.

Russia Says
Again She Won't Pay

The Soviet Union has announced that it will not pay $130 million in reparations to Germany, as demanded by the Allies. The Soviet Union has stated that it does not have the funds to make the payment and that it will not comply with the Allied demand. This is the third time that the Soviet Union has refused to pay the reparations, which were demanded after World War II. The Soviet Union has stated that it will continue to refuse to pay the reparations until it is satisfied that the Allies are willing to negotiate a fair settlement of the issue.

In DOLLAR value, the largest sum ever to be granted in a single fiscal year to the United States has been announced. The sum is $800 million, which is the amount of money that the United States has been granted by the European Coal and Steel Community (ECSC) for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1971. This is the largest sum ever to be granted to the United States by the ECSC, which was established in 1951 to promote economic cooperation among the countries of Western Europe. The United States has been a member of the ECSC since its establishment, and it has received grants from the organization every year since then.

The report was prepared by the UN Mission to the Middle East, which was established in 1961 to monitor the situation in the region. The mission has been working in the area since 1958, and it has been criticized by some countries for its role in the region. The mission's report was issued on the same day that the United Nations General Assembly voted to recognize the Palestinian People's Republic as a People's Republic in the Middle East.

String Quartet Prepares

For many years, a trip to Europe provides an ideal way to get away from work for a while. In particular, the annual String Quartet Festival of the University of St. Mary of the Woods is a wonderful event for all musicians and music lovers alike. This year's festival will feature performances by some of the world's leading quartets, including the Ysaye Quartet and the Juilliard String Quartet. The festival will take place from July 1st to July 15th, and interested parties are encouraged to purchase tickets in advance to ensure their place in this exciting cultural event.
Iowa ‘Rookie’ Hurls Self Out of Hazing

By ROB MOYERS

A ‘Rookie’ (Rick Rent) will be joining the Big Ten baseball teams this year to replace the outgoing seniors. Rent has been comfortably warming up for the new season, and he is expected to make an impact on the field.

Rent was just named the ‘Rookie’ of the Year for his outstanding performance in the summer leagues. He has a .372 batting average and 161 stolen bases, which is a new record for an incoming freshman.

“Rent is a true competitor,” said his high school coach. “He’s got the skills, and he’s got the drive. He’s going to be a force to be reckoned with.”

Rent has been working hard in the weight room and on the field to prepare for the challenges ahead. He is expected to play a key role in the team’s success this season.

Iowa To Test Gebhard’s Arm Against League’s Best Hitter

Iowa’sacio Gebhard will have a chance to improve his baseball record this year. The team is expected to come together and compete for the conference title.

“Gebhard is the key to our team’s success,” said Coach Tom Klein. “He’s got the talent and the attitude to lead us to victory.”

Backfield Coach Cites Iowa’s Potential

Filling in for the injured Johnson, Iowa’s backfield coach has high hopes for the team this season. He believes they have the potential to compete for the conference championship.

“Johnson’s injury is a blow, but we’re confident in our backups,” said the coach. “They’ve got the skills and the determination to step up and perform.”

Baseball Roundup

Giants 9, Phillies 4

The Giants dominated the Phillies with a strong performance by their young pitchers. Rent was named the ‘Rookie’ of the Game for his impressive showing.

Red Sox 8, Angels 7

The Red Sox secured a win over the Angels with a late rally in the ninth inning. Rent was instrumental in the team’s victory.

Colts 3, Pirates 1

The Colts won against the Pirates with a strong performance by their young pitcher. Rent was named the ‘Rookie’ of the Game for his impressive showing.

Baseball Tryout Information

Rent is expected to join the team for the baseball tryouts. He is scheduled to participate in the tryout along with other incoming freshmen.

The tryout will be held next month, and Rent is expected to compete against other aspiring players. He is looking forward to the opportunity to showcase his skills on the field.
