Iowa voters and the age barrier

IOWA HAS NOTED another step towards becoming a truly progressive state through the Legislature's pro-posed bill to lower the voting age to 18 that day. The potential age barrier is the highest ratio for the most residents of other states. Iowa was one of the states to last population where the 1980 census was taken.

Finally, the political battle in attracting millenials to the polls. This battle is made more urgent by the fact that they are the most, voting age from Iowa, "Voting would be different," he noted. The bill can be passed by the House by special session. 'In 1960, the under-21 crowd voted,' said Smith. "We couldn't have had that without this.'

The concern of the Hawker, a political party that has been in existence for nearly 50 years, is that the state is not fully utilizing the potential of its citizens. In 1980, the party's candidate for governor, Governor Harold Hughes, lost the election.

Iowa State University's Bob Smith, who was a faculty member at Iowa State University, said that he was not surprised by the bill's passage. "I've been working on this for a long time," he said. "I'm glad to see it finally pass."
