Security Council Splits On Proposals For Bringing Peace To Middle East

The Security Council was deadlocked yesterday on proposals for bringing peace to the Middle East. The council met for the sixth time and voted 9-5 on a resolution that called for an end to the war and the withdrawal of all foreign forces from the area. The resolution was sponsored by Egypt, Jordan, and Iraq and opposed by Israel, the United States, and the United Kingdom.

The United States and the United Kingdom were the main opponents of the resolution. The United States said that it would not recognize any resolution that did not guarantee Israel's security. The United Kingdom said that it would not recognize any resolution that did not guarantee the right of Israel to exist.

On the other hand, the Egyptians and the Jordanians said that the resolution would provide a basis for peace negotiations. The Israelis said that the resolution was a further attempt to impose a solution on them without their consent.

The resolution was the latest in a series of attempts by the United Nations to bring peace to the Middle East. The United Nations has been trying to negotiate a cease-fire for over two years, but has been unable to reach a consensus among the parties involved.

A fourth man, a student of the United States, was the only one to vote in favor of the resolution. He said that he believed that the resolution was a step in the right direction.

Israel and Egypt agreed to a cease-fire in the war yesterday, but the arms buildup continued. The United States and the United Kingdom have called for a comprehensive peace settlement, but Israel has refused to negotiate.

If you'd like a pizza, buy it from the university. If you don't, buy it elsewhere. If you're not happy with the service, complain to the manager. If you're not happy with the food, cook it yourself.

In the end, we're all just people with different tastes. Some like pizza, some don't. Some like fast food, some don't. Some like everything, some don't. But we're all just people trying to make the best of our situations. So, enjoy your pizza, and thank you for reading!

Nixon, Reagan Deny Making Election Deals

CHICAGO.—Sen. Ronald Reagan of California and Vice President-Elect Richard Nixon agreed Friday that they had not agreed to let any money go which might reach a third party, although they said Nixon voted to keep one possible deal that he considered important to Nixon’s political career.

Both men’s remarks were prompted by the Senate’s reported finding that President-elect Nixon was involved in a proposal that the Chicago Daily News had said might have been proposed by the Chicago Daily News.

Nixon, speaking on behalf of the White House, said he did not believe the Senate’s findings were correct, and he denied that he had made any arrangement to take money.
