Students—Tenant Seen as Own Worst Enemy

By RAY JANE DREIS
Theastic student may appear to be his own worst enemy in tenant-hostile conflicts, say the Iowa City legal aid group.

In separate interviews, F. Kelly Riley, director, and B. D. Boudreau, executive director, of their opinion on student-hostile landlords and gave reasons why they might not be fair.

"The student wants to assert his independence," Riley said. "But the landlord has not been able to make much progress in the past.

"In most cases, the landlord is more concerned about the student's right to a place to live and work than the student's right to live and work in a safe environment."

Both Boudreau and Riley advised tenants to seek legal advice when having tenant-hostile difficulties, but are probably unnecessarily afraid of the landlord.

Boudreau explained that frequently students have reported that their landlord is "not interested in making the necessary repairs or improvements in the rental property."

He said that the landlord is more concerned about the student's right to a place to live and work than the student's right to live and work in a safe environment.

Two students who were interviewed agreed that the landlord should have more interest in making repairs or improvements in the rental property.

"The landlord is more important to the student simply because he has the knowledge, experience, and resources to make the necessary repairs," said one student.

"The landlord is more concerned about the student's right to a place to live and work than the student's right to live and work in a safe environment," said the other student.

The composite effort

By ART BECKMANN

WASHINGTON — A noisy mob of thousands of demonstrators gathered in Lafayette Park last week to express their opposition to the Vietnam war. The event was known as "Moratorium Day," a national day of protest against the war.

The demonstration was the culmination of a week-long campaign by the Moratorium Committee, a group of 30 organizations that had been formed to organize the protest.

At the rally, speakers from all walks of life addressed the crowd, including students, union leaders, and religious leaders. The rally was attended by thousands of people, who filled the streets surrounding the White House.

The protest was the largest in recent history, and it was a turning point in the anti-war movement. It marked the beginning of a new phase in the struggle against the war, as well as a shift in public opinion.

The next month saw a significant increase in anti-war demonstrations, as well as a growing sense of determination among those who opposed the war. The Moratorium Day rally was a key moment in this process, and it helped to galvanize support for the anti-war movement.
Grandstanding
Set for Building

By William L. Boyd, Daily Iowan

Grandstanding for a $8,000,000 library is under way on the University campus, according to President Henry S. Rowan. Participants are university administrators, students, and faculty members.

For the second time in two days, the university is expected to announce plans for a new, larger library. The announcement will be made at a press conference on Wednesday, March 31. The location of the new library has not been disclosed.

The new library is expected to be completed in time for the fall semester, and will accommodate the growing student population.

Service Academies Unable To Keep Up on Gridiron

Win Victory sign in the coalition's fight to join the Big Ten and move the conference to the coast. The committee, which has held three meetings this summer, has decided to make the move to the West Coast effective in 1969.

The committee's decision comes after a series of meetings with college presidents and athletic directors from the Big Ten, Pac-10, and Southwest conferences. The move was prompted by the desire to increase the conference's visibility and revenue potential.

The new conference will be known as the Western Athletic Conference (WAC) and will consist of the members of the Big Ten who are located on the West Coast: Washington, Oregon, Stanford, and UCLA.

Service academies unable to keep up on Gridiron

THE DAILY IOWA—Low City, Ia.—N.—The University of Maryland is not expected to be able to keep up on Gridiron this year, the University of Maryland football coach, who spoke to the press yesterday, said.

"We are not going to be able to keep up on Gridiron this year," the coach said. "We have had some problems with our offensive line and our defensive line, but we are going to try to improve in those areas.

"We have a lot of new players, and we are going to have to give them some time to adjust to the college game," the coach said. "But we are going to try to improve our performance on Gridiron this year."

Nobel Prize Goes to Math Economists—
2 Europeans Get Economics Award

STOCKHOLM — Two Euro-ppean economists, who translated mathematical economics for use in the real world, won the Nobel Prize in Economics. They were jointly awarded the $930,- 000 prize on Monday for "services rendered to economic science, particular for the advances in the theory of economic history, for the analysis of economic problems and for the proposal of a system of economic regulation." The 1974 winners were James Tobin from Yale University and Alvin H. Hansen from the University of Chicago.

Tobin, a 56-year-old mathematician who for 20 years has been studying how economies work, did research that led to the Tobin effect, which helps explain how financial markets work. Hansen, 60, a Boston University economist, did research on the role of government in the economy.

They were chosen by the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences, which announced the prize for the first time.

The economists will divide the prize equally, with their institutions receiving the money.

The award ceremony will take place in Stockholm on December 10.

The prize, officially called the Alfred Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science, is not one of the original Nobel prizes, but was established in 1969 by Alfred Nobel's widow, who left money to the Swedish Academy of Sciences.

"indian Territory" is the title of the painting by Edward Nelson, which won first prize in the competition sponsored by the National Symphony Orchestra. It is hung on the wall of the new music program, which is located in the east wing of the campus.

Moliere Players are all in the family, according to their given names. The Nelsons are the family's patriarch, and their daughter is the matriarch. The Nelson's son, Peter, is the director of the Moliere Players, and his wife, Sarah, is the head of the drama department.

The Indian Territory exhibit, which features traditional music and dance, is scheduled to open on October 11th. The exhibit will run through November 30th, and admission is free to all visitors.

The Nelsons are both avid readers, and they enjoy spending their free time in the library. They have a large collection of books, and they often choose books that reflect their cultural background.

Local Zen Buddhist Group Seeks the Nature of Reality

By Dan Eshelman

The calm, unassuming voice of the speaker, Harriet Toole, is the perfect complement to the quiet atmosphere of the room. She speaks softly, her words measured and deliberate, as though she is speaking to a group of friends rather than to a gathering of students.

The Zen Buddhist Group has been meeting weekly for the past few months, and each session is led by Harriet Toole. She is a Zen Buddhist nun who has been studying the teachings of Zen for many years and has a deep understanding of the practice.

Harriet begins the session by asking the students to sit quietly and focus on their breath. She explains that the practice of Zen meditation involves sitting in a relaxed but upright position, with the body positioned in a way that allows the mind to become calm and focused.

She then leads the group in a guided meditation, where they are encouraged to simply observe their breath and to let any thoughts come and go without judgment.

After the meditation, the group shares their experiences and observations with each other. They discuss the feelings and thoughts that arose during the meditation and how they relate to their daily lives.

Harriet emphasizes the importance of self-reflection and self-discovery in the practice of Zen. She encourages the students to bring their own unique experiences and perspectives to the group, and to be open to learning from each other.

The group is made up of a diverse group of people, ranging in age from 18 to 60, and from a variety of backgrounds. Some are students, some are faculty members, and others are local community members.

The group meets every Monday night at 7:00 p.m. in the Iowa City Community Theatre. The sessions are open to all, and there is no cost to attend. The group welcomes everyone, regardless of their level of experience or knowledge of Zen.

To learn more about the Zen Buddhist Group, or to join the group, please contact Harriet Toole at the Iowa City Community Theatre at 319-353-2578.
