Vietnam Veteran Refuses Honors at Rally—Blacks Protest ‘Carnival’

By MARK KOCHER

TOWN, IOWA—Vietnam veteran Bernard McPherson, 36, said yesterday that he was "too damn tired" to accept the presentation of awards at a rally here honoring Vietnam veterans.

"I have been up and down and now I have decided that it is just too much," Mr. McPherson said as he left the stage yesterday at the University of Iowa after refusing to receive the awards.

Mr. McPherson, who served in Vietnam from 1968 to 1969, said he was not happy with the award presentation and that he would not accept the awards.

"I have been through too much to accept awards," he said.

The presentation ceremony was held at the University of Iowa Athletic Field, where a crowd of about 500 people gathered to honor veterans.

Mr. McPherson, who served as a medic in Vietnam, said he was not happy with the way the ceremony was handled.

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter to Joseph E. King, who is living in Columbus. This is a letter from a friend of mine, a boy who I think you would like to meet.

As I write this letter, a cloud of fog is creeping in. It is looking like it is going to be a rainy day, but the sun is shining through the clouds and the windows are open. Everything is so peaceful and serene, and I can see the street. It is a quiet street, with no cars or people moving around. It is a great day to be outdoors.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]

To Close May 13; Time for Protests

Grinnell College will close for the semester at noon on May 13 to allow students to protest and engineers to fulfill their academic obligations.

Lego said that students understand that the college is in the last few weeks of the semester and therefore expects students to fulfill their academic obligations.

The college received an estimated 11,000 signatures on a petition signed by 200 students for the extension of the semester. The event is expected to draw from 1,000 to 2,000 students. The closing of the school is expected to generate about $2 million in revenue.

Robert C. dropped all charges Friday against the 14 students scheduled to go on trial Monday. The protest was the first in the college's history. President Allen expressed his appreciation for the efforts of the students in organizing the protest.

President Allen said that he was pleased with the outcome of the protest and looked forward to working with the students to resolve the issues raised.

Future giving

At any rate, the faculty withdrew. In fact, the faculty has voted to withdraw from the university with the support of the students. The students also voted to withdraw from the university, but the faculty has said it will not accept their withdrawal without a vote by the students.

Glenn Leggett, the student president, said the students voted to withdraw from the university.

Faculty members agreed with the students' decision, but said they will not accept the withdrawal without a vote by the students.

It was 1 a.m. May 8, 1970, What had happened at other campuses - Berkeley, Kent State, the University of Kentucky - shrouded the campus as an omnipresent threat. Down town, a command was spoken.

A line of police officers wound its way silently up from the Civic Center to the Campus Security office, located across Jefferson Street from the Pentacrest.

On the east steps of Old Capitol, a vague murmur filtered through the air, but a crowd of demonstrators determined in their vociferous resolve to remain - at all costs. Captain Lyle Dickson, of the Iowa Highway Patrol, informed students of the consequences of their refusal to disperse. And then the crowd on the Pentacrest was quiet, every one watching to see what would happen next.

What did happen was peaceful and orderly. Two hundred police officers escorted about that same number of demonstrators to a waiting University bus. Dickinson used his bullhorn to caution and calm men and the crowd. City Manager Frank Smiley, along with the students, filed out with one group that wanted to be arrested.

Police took about two-thirds of the demonstrators to the city jail, located in the Civic Center. The peaceful cooperation shown by demonstrators in voluntarily walking in their arrest column, right in front of the jail, that peacefulness worked a little bit easier.

Need a little fun? Here's a suggestion from Paula Oerleban, post-master of Port Nicholson, 4th in the "Year of Joe Egg," which reached last night in Radio Theatre.

"Joe Egg" is one of the songs recorded by the "People's Choir of Iowa," which is now touring the state. The choristers are singing the song to raise money for the Iowa Highway Conservancy.

The song was written by Joe Egg, a 19-year-old student at the University of Iowa, who is studying music education.

The choristers are scheduled to perform the song at various locations throughout the state, including the State Capitol in Des Moines.

The choristers are also planning to record a CD of the song, which they will sell to raise money for the Iowa Highway Conservancy.
