Up and down

Following temperatures bouncing up and down in recent days, the United States government has rushed to declare an emergency. The situation is volatile, and lives have been lost due to the rapid changes in temperature. Observers believe this trend will continue as the season progresses.

Will debate

The Senate is scheduled to meet at 2 p.m. today, according to the Senate's official calendar. The meeting will focus on the impeachment trial of President Donald Trump. The trial is expected to last several days, with votes on key amendments and final votes scheduled for Friday.

Pistol plot

The House Judiciary Committee has voted to impeach President Donald Trump, making him the third president in American history to be impeached. The vote comes after weeks of intense deliberation, with Republicans defending the president and Democrats pressing for action.

Poison plot

The Senate has voted to acquit President Donald Trump of the charges brought against him in the impeachment trial. The vote was 52-48, with Republicans supporting acquittal and Democrats voting to convict. The outcome means that Trump will remain in office.

Pay Board

The Pay Board is scheduled to meet today to discuss the proposed pay raises for federal employees. The board will consider the recommendations of the National Performance Review and make final decisions on salaries.

Vietnam

The United States and Vietnam have agreed to normalize relations, with the signing of a joint statement expected to be announced later today. The move is seen as a significant step in the reconciliation process.

Bank blame

The Federal Reserve and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency have been criticized for their handling of the recent bank failures. The regulators are said to have been too slow in identifying and addressing the issues.

Home rule plan gets Senate ok

The Senate has passed a home rule plan, which will give cities and towns more autonomy in managing their affairs. The measure is supported by both major parties and is expected to go to the House for further consideration.

Would curtail traffic through campus—

UI officials propose changes in city renewal traffic plans

Skateboarders

The University of Iowa is considering changes to its traffic policies, including the possibility of building a skatepark on campus. The proposal has sparked controversy, with some students and faculty opposing the idea.

Muskie, Hughes exchange back-patting

The fight between Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) and Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.) for the Democratic presidential nomination has intensified. Kennedy has accused Humphrey of being a "despotic" candidate, while Humphrey has criticized Kennedy for his "pugnacious" style.

Muskie to announce Sen. McGovern's support

Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) is expected to announce the endorsement of Sen. George McGovern (D-S.D.) today. The move is seen as a significant boost for Kennedy's campaign.
Abortion arguments

To the editor:

The central issue in determining whether abortion should be legal is whether abortion is a right. There are many major positions on the issue. The first is that the unborn is a part of the mother. The second is that the unborn is a separate being with rights up to birth. The third is that the unborn is a potential individual until birth. The fourth is that the unborn is a human being from the moment of conception. The fifth is that the unborn is not a separate individual until birth. The sixth is that the unborn is a separate individual before birth.

I believe that abortion should be legal in cases where the life of the mother is in danger. I also believe that abortion should be legal in cases where there is a severe physical or mental handicap in the child. I do not believe that abortion should be legal in cases where the child is not wanted, or for social reasons.

Blue laws over Iowa

By DAVE HALEND

The Iowa legislature has failed to pass any new blue laws in the 1973 session. This means that the state will continue to enforce the existing blue laws until the next session.

The blue laws are a series of statutes that regulate the sale of alcoholic beverages, such as beer, wine, and spirits. These laws are intended to control the consumption of alcohol and prevent public health problems associated with alcohol abuse.

The blue laws are enforced by local law enforcement agencies, such as police departments and sheriff's offices. The enforcement of the blue laws is a local matter, and the penalties for violating the blue laws vary from one locality to another.

The blue laws are intended to promote responsible alcohol consumption and to reduce the impact of alcohol abuse on the community. The enforcement of the blue laws is a important aspect of public safety and community well-being.

Wants Stui article

To the editor:

I would like to contribute to a recent article by SheUey Sh... Gary Dull. The article was titled "The Need for a New University." The article discussed the need for a new university to provide a more comprehensive education.

I agree with the authors that there is a need for a new university. I believe that the current system of higher education is not fulfilling the needs of students. The current system is too focused on the needs of the state and not the students.

Car law enforcement reduc... 2-THI El All Y IOWAN-I ..

In the spirit of constructive discussion, I would like to address the issue of car law enforcement in Iowa.

Many people believe that car law enforcement is a haphazard affair. I believe that this is not true. The Iowa State Patrol and local law enforcement agencies work hard to enforce the law and keep the roads safe.

I would like to urge the public to support our law enforcement agencies by obeying the law and driving safely.

Sincerely,

John Doe

Officers—a traffic hazard?

To the editor:

I have observed that police officers are often seen standing in the middle of the road, causing potential traffic hazards.

I believe that this practice is unnecessary and dangerous. Police officers should be visible and accessible to the public.

Sincerely,

Latest U.S.-Soviet flare-up won't hamper Moscow trip

Senator Edmund Muskie, Governor of Maine and a leading candidate for the Democratic nomination in 1972, announced on Tuesday that he would not visit Moscow as the representative of the United States. Muskie stated that he had hoped to visit Moscow to improve relations with the Soviet Union, but the recent flare-up in the U.S.-Soviet conflict has made it impossible for him to go.

Muskie reaffirms Viet plan

President Nixon has been criticized by Senator Edmund Muskie, Governor of Maine, for his policy towards Vietnam. Muskie stated that he would not visit Moscow as the representative of the United States, but he would support any efforts to end the war in Vietnam.

WASHINGTON — The administration sought Tuesday to keep a rash of incidents from souring U.S.- Soviet relations at a conference in advance of President Nixon's scheduled journey to Moscow on Friday. Presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler and Senator Wayne Morse, Oregon Democratic, appeared at the conference with two Soviet fishing vessels that were being held at the New York harbor, but that had not been captured as was claimed from the Soviets.

"This isn't a deliberate provocation," the Ziegler Department official said. "It is a very disturbing incident. This is a very serious matter. It is a very serious business. It is a very serious situation." Soviet authorities said that the two fishing vessels were being held because they had not been captured by the Soviets.

WASHINGTON — Soviets drag fishing feet

JUNEAU, Alaska — A U.S. Coast Guard cutter on Tuesday took the fishing vessels that were seized by the Soviets, but said they would not be returned to the United States. The Coast Guard cutter, the "Wendy Gray," was ordered by the U.S. Department of Commerce to return the vessels to the United States.

A Coast Guard official said that the vessels were seized by the Soviets because they had not been properly registered with the U.S. Coast Guard. The vessels had reportedly been operating illegally in U.S. waters.

Women may get 'a head' in change of U.S. ship rules

WASHINGTON—Women's May be getting a head—at least among shipbuilders.
The head, or shipbuilding bottleneck, for many years has been the same one: men, who are generally more experienced, are more likely to obtain jobs and a career.

The U.S. Coast Guard is trying to change that. The agency is taking steps to accommodate women in the shipbuilding industry, including training programs and new career opportunities.

Current regulations for passengers, cargo and other vessels require that at least 50% of the crew be made up of men. The Coast Guard is considering relaxing this requirement to allow for more flexibility in crew composition.

The Maritime Union, which has represented shipbuilders for decades, has expressed support for the idea of allowing more women to work on ships. The union believes that this would help to address the shortage of experienced workers in the industry.

The Coast Guard has also announced plans to expand its training programs to include more women. The agency is working with schools and universities to develop new courses and programs that will attract more female students.

A spokesman for the National Maritime Union in New York City says he is confident that the change will be a positive development for the industry.

The move is expected to slow the pace of construction and could delay delivery of new ships. However, the Coast Guard notes that the changes are designed to improve the safety and efficiency of the industry, and that they will be implemented in a way that does not compromise the standards for shipping safety and security.

State will file petition today

for rehearing of remap plan

DES MOINES—The Iowa Supreme Court will hear arguments in a case involving the reapportionment of the state's House of Representatives.

The court will hear the case, which involves a challenge to the 2011 redistricting plan, on Friday.

Attorneys for the state are expected to argue that the plan violates the state constitution.

The court is expected to rule on the case later this year.

State Sen. Terry Branstad, R-Des Moines, has called the plan the most significant since the state's first constitution in 1846.

Branstad said the plan is unfair because it gives too many representatives to urban areas and not enough to rural areas.

The plan is also expected to be challenged in Congress, where it has not been approved by both chambers.

The Devils is not a film for everyone.

It is a true story, carefully documented, historically accurate—a serious work by a distinguished film maker. As such it is likely to be hated as a masterpiece by some. But because it is so rich and highly graphic in depicting the horrors of the war, the film will be released for public viewing.

We feel a responsibility to alert you to this.

It is our hope that only those who are interested will see it. The film is not suitable for children.

Suit possible against Atlanta Indian symbol

ATLANTA — The nation's most controversial new football symbol could be the target of a lawsuit, according to a Georgia attorney who says the team's logo violates federal trademark law.

The attorney, John C. Dabney, said in a sworn statement that the Atlanta Falcons' logo, which features a Native American headband and feathered headdress, is similar to a logo used by the Cleveland Indians of Major League Baseball.

Dabney said in an attempt to stop the Falcons' use of the logo, he has filed a federal lawsuit in federal court in Columbus, Ohio, seeking an injunction.

The Indians have a long history of using the team's logo, which features a Native American chief in a headdress and feathered headdress.

The logo has been the subject of controversy for decades, with many Native American groups and fans calling for its removal.

Dabney said in the lawsuit that the Falcons' logo is similar to the Indians' logo and that the use of the相似identity violates federal trademark law.
