UI's aid helps city nab 'overtimers'

By JUDY HAYN
Daily Iowan Staff Writer

The University of Iowa's student body pitched in to help the city of Iowa City catch those who violate the city's free parking policy.

"We only got the (II) bill when the department notified us," University Police Chief Howard岗 said. "I've had a couple of people on the phone who were the most frustrated with it," he said.

According to the city's timetable, the free parking policy goes into full effect March 15. Until then, UI students will have 30 days to come forward and pay for their parking, or have their licenses revoked.

The free parking policy, approved by City Council Monday night, allows UI students to park for free in city lots if they present a valid, unexpired parking permit. The policy applies only to UI students and does not extend to other members of the UI community, including students at the Iowa City Community College.

UI Parking Operations Director Bruce Holcomb said the proposed agreement on the new policy was in effect immediately. The policy replaces a previous one that allowed students to park for free if they presented their student IDs.

The new policy eliminates the need to request exceptions and removes the possibility of excluding students from the parking system. Holcomb said.

In the years to come, the new policy is expected to increase revenue for the city, Holcomb said.

"The council asked Holcomb to look into the situation," Mayor Leonard J. Hett said. "He presented an argument in favor of changing the policy. The council is interested in finding out how we can get the city to break even."

The policy change, which will go into effect next month, will require UI students to pay $30 for a parking permit for the academic year, in addition to UI student fees.

"When it was pointed out that the university had an agreement with the parking program, the council was interested in looking at other possibilities," Hett said. "The council asked Holcomb to see if there were other ways to make the parking program work."

According to Holcomb, the city's free parking program is designed to help students who may not own the cars that were parked there.

Wally Ginn, chief of police at the University of Iowa Police Department, said the new policy is likely to increase revenue for the city.

Ray vs. Jepsen over drinking age

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Monday debated a bill that would set the drinking age at 18 across the nation, a measure that would have to be signed into law by President Ronald Reagan to become effective.

The bill, introduced by Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., passed the Senate by a 80-12 vote, with most Republicans opposing it.

The measure would overrule state laws that allow youths to purchase alcohol, and it would prohibit anyone from selling or furnishing alcohol to youths younger than 18.

The Senate debate was the first step in the legislative process to enact the measure, which is expected to be considered by the House later this week.

The bill has been the subject of intense debate, with opponents arguing that it would lead to increased drinking among young people and support for illegal drug use.

Supporters of the bill say it would reduce the number of underage deaths and injuries related to alcohol consumption and help prevent youth from becoming dependent on alcohol.

The Senate vote was the first in a series of votes that will be taken during the current session. The House is expected to vote on the measure later this week.

The legislation is expected to be signed into law by President Reagan.

Walldheim moves with decisiveness

New U.N. Sec.-Gen. draws praise

The U.N. secretary-general (a position that was created by the United Nations charter in 1945) has moved decisively with new vigor after his election in September. As the new secretary-general, he has quickly demonstrated his readiness to take charge of the United Nations, which has been described as a "sleeping giant.

Walldheim's appointment was announced by the U.N. international organization after a five-month search. The new secretary-general has already made his mark by taking decisive action to improve the efficiency of the U.N. system. He has also sought to strengthen the U.N. role in peacekeeping operations and to ensure the neutrality of the U.N. in global affairs.

Walldheim, a former Austrian minister of foreign affairs, had previously served as a U.N. peacekeeper in Africa and as a U.N. envoy to Somalia. He has also been a member of the U.N. Security Council and a member of the U.N. Economic Commission for Europe.

Walldheim's decisive leadership has been praised by many. "He is the person we need," said one U.N. official. "He is a strong leader who knows how to get things done."
Clifford Irving talks

Rl Y. C L A R K E For The Daily Iowan

American students take a great deal for granted in their university, most of the things that are cultural and social institutions on the campus and the traditions of the institution in which they grew up. The environment of university life is not a big departure from high school in many ways. But the foreign student in this strange land and even stranger university faces a unique problem of adapting himself to a new environment.

The problem has been particularly onerous for the Iowa citizens in the past because there has been so many active student-sponsored and teacher-sponsored groups who put the foreign student on the spot. We are happy to see that the foreign student organizations have grown and matured over the past years. Right now, universities have become an American dominated group. The foreign student organization and the cultural requirements of the foreign students are very important. It is only in the foreign community that the foreign community has placed emphasis on foreignness and wants others to feel that there was much more individual differences.

Davis has a student organization in the foreign community which assists students in solving problems which have some similarity in students from the American and foreign universities. The purpose of the series is to bring American and foreign students together in meaningful activities to an international base. The problem among the students presented during this year have been participation in the Globelink Club, an international film and music club, and the Information Service. The Information Service is the international center for providing information to the University overseas, the mappng, formating, and screen serving at a cricket team, cultural activities and interest. There are three centers: an Intercollegiate Center and a foreign program.

The missions have been written, the center center involved and the international center which has grown in the past years. The center has grown in the past years. It is the center involved and the international center which has grown.

The Action Course Project H.O.P.E., the Student Senate will work on a special classified feature called, "A Valentine Message to My Loved One," which will assist students in solving problems which have some similarity in students from the American and foreign universities.

Do or die for Hawkeyes

BY KEITH GILBERT

With Iowa's battered Hawkeyes must be wondering if they'll make it another season of bowl games. With an injury-ridden team, Ohio State and Minnesota coming up this week, the Hawkeyes are faced with a tough schedule.

As they will in this very week period. At the start of the season observers thought the Hawkeyes would be one of the great teams in the Big Ten. Hawkeye fans were beginning to think the same thing. Iowa was rolling toward another until sidetracked early last week when Notre Dame. Next, word had decided to cast their lots with Ohio State and Minnesota during the winters of 1968-69. Mark Wagar had attracted a lot of attention and a pair of big fellows named Witte and Weatherspoon were also accredited in Ohio.

The Hawkeyes are coming off a win and are coming into 1970 with a team that has been a revelation of late. Iowa is only the second team in the Big Ten to outscore its opponents in both conference and nonconference games. Iowa is 7-1.
