WITHSTAND (AP) — A House subcommittee investigating the U.S. Department of Justice's anti-crime program "had no impact" on crime rate, said a member of the panel.

"If the budget was cut, would the program have been shut down? That cannot be said with certainty," said Rep. Bob Barr (R-Ga.), the chairman of the subcommittee. "The program was not designed to reduce crime, but to address the causes of crime."

Barr said that the anti-crime program had been "largely ineffective" and that its impact on crime had been "minimal." He added that the program had been "a complete waste of money." "It's a dumb idea," Barr said. "The government should be doing something else.""

Black experience: A survival crisis

BY STEVE MAXWELL

The story of receiving marijuana "gifts" that helped to build the University of Georgia's black movement in America should remind us of the struggle for civil rights in the 1960s.

The five professors cited in the program's title is "Where do we go from here?" by saying that the black movement should establish economic and political power.

Perry R. Watters, chairman of the of the US Black Student Union (BSU), opened the program. Watters said that the black movement has had a "network of supporters" throughout the years.

The judge's opinion in accepting a plea of guilty to receiving marijuana "gifts" is that the evidence showed that seven men and one woman welcomed them as gifts. One woman was shown in evidence that they were accepted as legitimate gifts.

Watters said that the judge's decision for re-establishing the black movement is a "symbolic" step in the development of the black movement.

Was it possible that Muskie himself had been misled by the rosy view of the Democratic Party and the press, in which he had a role as a major player? The role of a front-runner is not always a comfortable one, and Muskie may well have been feeling more vulnerable in the heat of the campaign than he had been in the cool, private moments of the past few weeks. The pressure of the media, the constant questioning, the constant comparison with his rivals—all of these things must have been making him feel more uncertain about his position than he had been before.

Of course, there was always the possibility that Muskie was simply overconfident. He had been the front-runner for the nomination for a long time, and he had been able to count on the support of the party establishment. But now, with the help of the press and the public, he was facing a new challenge, and he was not sure how he was going to handle it.

In the end, the truth may be that Muskie was simply too ambitious for his own good. He had set his sights too high, and he had not been able to meet the expectations that had been placed on him. Perhaps he should have been content with the nomination, and he should have focused on the issues rather than on the road to the nomination. But in the end, it was too late. The campaign was over, and Muskie had been left behind, a victim of his own ambition.
There is a presidential election this year. I'm keeping up on it by reading Rolling Stone religiously. They seem to have a pretty good handle on the primaries and the candidates. His fortuity reports have hit the candidate square on the head. He doesn't bullshit about defense, foreign policy, balance of payments, the farm bill, or ending any of the wars we are currently involved in. "Peace and Love" is strictly about campaigns and candidates.

Writing about McGovern in the current issue, Thompson said:

"The main problem in any democracy is that crowd-pleasers are generally brainwash-some who can go out on a stage and whip their supporters into an organic frenzy—then go back to the office and sell candidate at one of his whistle stops. He doesn't bullshit about American electoral politics. All this year I'm keeping up with the politicians in America; it is that bothers me about these men. Two things are needed to win; and I've finally figured out what they are. First, you have to make everyone think the campaign—financing, packing, intensive bombing, spreading for contraband, and for any correctional programs and activities. You may write back to the inmate, and ask him questions. Your letter will be in-

"Winch harks back to McGovern's problem. He is probably the most honest big time politician in America. Robert Kennedy, several years before he was murdered, called George McGovern the most decent man in the Senate."

"What else can you say about American political elections?"

Iowa gymnast John Weiskopf, 13, of Darlington, Ill., will start at catcher next Saturday for the Hawkeye football team. Weiskopf, who has played football for Darlington High School, said he was excited about the opportunity to play on the same field as his older brother, John, who is a senior at Iowa.

"I'm really looking forward to it," Weiskopf said. "I've been practicing with the team this summer, and I'm ready to go."

The Hawkeyes are scheduled to play the University of Illinois at Champaign on Saturday, and Weiskopf is expected to start behind the plate.

Early practice for Hawks

If your football buddies are yawning today, don't feel bad. There's nothing much going on in the world of Iowa Hawkeye football today. In fact, the team's last practice was on Friday, and they don't have another scheduled until Tuesday.

Iowa Football Coach Fran Tarkenton has been keeping a low profile this week, and he's not expected to make any major personnel changes until next week.

"We're basically working on fundamentals, developing our offense with particular emphasis on the offensive line," Tarkenton said. "We're also working with our special teams." Following Saturday's two-hour practice session and the accompanying scrimmage, Tarkenton was asked about his team's progress.

"We're making some progress," he said. "But we're not where we need to be yet. We have a long way to go."

Tennis court lights

We received the following letter on a matter that comes up fairly often. There is a constant need for more people who support this, we like to hear from them.

Dear Mr. Gillett:

I am writing to call your attention to the great demand that exists at the University of Iowa for tennis courts during the day, and in the warm weather many older players would much prefer to play after noon. The facilities of tennis courts are rarely used by players over, say, 60 years old, and would enable many more people to take advantage of the outdoor courts, especially since the Recreation Center courts seem to be constantly used.

Sincerely,

John A. Green

The Iowa "B" team was beaten by Iowa State in the opening game of the afternoon, but as the victory gained a little bit of the way they played.

We played a great game and were able to save the point and win the match.

Kernels announced the dual role of the match tonight.

"I'm not bothered by the performance of both teams," said the referee who ran the two matches. Two teams who can win the tournament can expect to win the match.

Iowa has 30 players on the roster and the tournament finishes on the day it is played.

We integrated our backfield and forward play well today.

Kernels add, "We didn't have time to see that there were two more people that support this, and we hope that enough people will support this."
One or Three gets checking FREE at F.N.B.

The First National is introducing a better no-charge checking service. One or Three gets checking FREE at F.N.B. We offer both a one hundred dollar minimum balance or a three hundred dollar average balance to qualify. Here's how it works. The First National gives you more opportunity to avoid the monthly charge on checking. Some banks will give you no-charge checking only if your balance never drops below a hundred dollars. First National Bank doesn't think that's very free.

Keep $100 in your account at all times. Or average $200 for the month. Either way (you don't have to choose, our computer figures it both ways) no service charge. Should your checking balance fall below both of these, the service charge is only a dollar and you still write as many checks as you like. One or Three gets checking FREE at F.N.B.

Podolak: ‘owners control us’

Ed Podolak

If their situation is like many was in 1970, I guess it primarily goes beyond the monetary. It’s a matter of whether the owners are going to continue to call the guys they hire. If the owners don’t like it, they can take it or leave it.

Part of the problem, according to Podolak is that the owners tend to control things the way they want them controlled. It’s obvious that the owners control the general managers. They control the general managers, and they control the situation. They control the boss men, and the minor sports writers, they control the local sports writers, and eventually it gets released. This is where you start to see the owners and they’ve always done this.

Ed sees the ownership of the players as one of the big problems.

The owners are bleeding it to death. There’s too much TV exposure and too much labor-management and negotiations with A.” Podolak says that there has been a lot of controversy and debate about the salary structure in pro sports.

Although I can’t really say what the situation is, my sympathy is with the players,” said Podolak.

Podolak was here Saturday as a guest speaker for a high school sports award banquet, one of many such invitations he receives during the year.

His own career in the baseball business appears to be similar to his that began in football in 1966. He entered the minor leagues with the Kansas City Chiefs, and three years in the pros have been good to him. He believes all sources both on and off the field approach $10,000 but money and instant fame have not detached his basic philosophy.

“I believe that baseball is the greatest game in the world. It’s an American pastime,” Podolak once said in an interview.

All too often they tend to see the athlete as an over inflated kid still playing football or baseball. In football the players have earned the right to be where they are.
