Gladdness is...

Now that J. Edgar Hoover is dead we will be subjected to praise that will be so sincere when the body is bared but undoubtedly revived during law-and-order campaign speeches, the dedication of FBI headquarters to his memory, and the issuing of a commemorative postage stamp in his honor.

Depending on what you consider to be the job of a federal police department and how well you think it did the job, the term should be turned over to the beneficiaries of "America's foremost crime fighter." "The man whose name would be on the lips of law and order and on, and on, I think I'm going to sick."

The expression of Hoover's coming of the FBI are legion. His turning the Bureau into a personality cult; the federal arrest he once made of a criminal who had been discussed in the Boston newspapers the morning he came in, and leaving with his hands against a wall for five minutes before Hoover arrived tomorrow, the constant cries of "control the conspiracy" when budget time came to Capitol Hill; the sea expense reports that was not the Free, Americans, and his inability to cope with organized crime are all matters of public record.

Hoover's record as a crime fighter has been less than adequate due to the fact that he seemed more concerned with morality, radical politics and the private lives of those around him. Remember, during Hoover's administration the Mafia has been able to exercise great economic, legal and political power. This was at the same time that Hoover was running around checking on who was interfering with us. You'll hear much about Hoover's victories over crime. Victories mainly over individuals, poor criminals, small time criminals. In short, against the weak criminals; his record against big time criminals; the Mafia types, the labor racketeers, the corporate price fixers, the bonds important people and, as mentioned because, for the most part, they do not exist.

A lot of people are glad that Hoover died. I am simply in no position of being director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Maybe now we'll get on a hard line crime instead of squabbling with radical platitude, the capture of one-shot bank robbers, and the harassment of those who oppose Hoover.

At the root

In case you missed it, the papers recently carried a heart warming story about Mrs. Irene McCabe, an average American housewife who walked 9 miles from her house in Pontiac, Mich. to the steps of the White House to dramatize her school's problem of desegregation. Signs carried by some of the demonstrators read: "We want prayer and Bible reading back in schools." "We want badly educated and exploited neighborhood schools." "And quit busting our children like cattle; we will stop this Communist conspiracy!"

It's gratifying to know that there are still mothers who care enough about their children that they will spend personal sacrifices to keep their children from going to school.

"Oh, what an awful thing to say!" I was told by Mrs. Lily White, of the Citizens for God and Country. "We haven't got anything against nigger colored people. It's just that I don't see why my kid has to go to school with niggers."

Listen, landlords!

To the Editors is that the landlords are listening.

As are most apartment dwellers in Iowa City. I am content with a roof over my head, and happy with my living conditions. Things could always be better, I imagine. Hence, the annual spring search for the super-deal of deals.

After five years of annual searches, I have finally reached my saturation point for anything I consider false advertise.

I do not think there is an unroadbed kitchen in the living room in a luxury, in any of the American Legion Hall is close to campus. I do not think that this is the kind of convenience. I do not think consumers are against.

One of the most outstanding cases of false advertising I have found to date, involves a free apartment in return for certain custodial duties. The "free apartment" is, in fact, the second bedroom of a mobile home. When asked if this could honestly be called an apartment, the landlord retorted, "Well, there would be kitchen privileges.

Lover, please? Why not print the truth? More than likely, there is someone who really wants a whole apartment in the room, at a room, at a room with cooking privileges, or a care with an escort. The two certainly pay a lot of time and effort to get an apartment for all seasons. "You won't find a better deal than this.""

Peptone stuns Chicago with 'I quit' statement

CHICAGO (AP) — Joe Pepitone, colorful and controversial first baseman for the Chicago Cubs, resigned Tuesday by announcing the move to the press in a press conference.

Pepitone, who leads the National League in runs batted in, said he was frustrated with the Cubs' management and wanted to play elsewhere.

"I think it's because of anyone," he said.

The move was criticized by Cubs president Bill Veeck, who praised Pepitone at a press conference.

"I don't know what Joe problem really is," Veeck said.

The resignation of the leading NL RBI man could jeopardize a Cubs' comeback in the NL East, where they are currently third place.

The Cubs did not immediately comment on the resignation.

New York (Nadel 2-0), N

Brian Wood, the Cubs' young southpaw, was back with the A's for his second start of the season. He was throwing his best stuff since returning from a lengthy injury.

Bob Feller, the largest of the NL pitchers, was hit by a line drive but was able to continue.

The Cubs' batter fell behind 1-2 but managed to hit a home run off of Bob Feller in the third inning.

Brian Wood started strong but was unable to maintain his momentum in the middle innings.

The Cubs' offense struggled, though they managed to score six runs against the A's pitching.

Despite the strong performance by Wood, the A's won the game 11-6 in nine innings.
