MSG kills brain cells

WASHINGTON (AP) — Babies may be exposed to the risk of brain damage if foods containing monosodium glutamate, a st. Louis researcher testified Thursday.

Dr. Robert Zawislak of Washington University School of Medicine testified for a client, the National Monosodium Glutamate Council, in a special Senate hearing.

"Our studies..." he said, "clearly show that MSG..."

Government spokesmen say MSG kills cells in the hypothalamus, a high density area of nerve cells that control hunger, and the brain stem, which helps control breathing and blood pressure.

When the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs heard Dr. Zawislak's findings, showing that monosodium glutamate — MSG — damages brain cells in laboratory animals, lawmakers were startled.

"We are very concerned," said Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., "that the public be warned about dangers that may be posed by the use of MSG..."

In 1965 to 1966, there were 800 complaints of illness from MSG, but since then, the number of complaints has been negligible. So far, 150 people have tested for MSG and all have had normal results. The Food and Drug Administration has no evidence of any problem with MSG.

But Dr. Zawislak said, "If MSG were put on the market today, we would be justified in saying that it would be considered a neurotoxin."

He said the danger to human infants was not expected when Dr. Zawislak's research was being done.

He said MSG's presence in foods had not been studied when the council was formed.

"And the public was not informed," he said.

"We are all disturbed..." said Sen. Harry Byrd, D-Va., "by the reports that have been heard..."

Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., proposed a moratorium on MSG until further studies could be done.

"I do not know..." he said, "where the center of investigation will be..."

The Senate hearings are scheduled to continue until March 5, 1972.

Middle-aged stevedores

back to work

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four hundred stevedores, who have been on strike since last fall, are returning to the docks.

The stevedores, who had been picketing ships docked in the harbor because of a contract that ended their strike, were ordered back to work by a federal judge.

The strike began when the stevedores tried to organize a union to negotiations. The union held a strike vote, and the stevedores were then ordered back to work.

The strike was called off because of a disagreement between the company and the union over the terms of the new contract. The union has agreed to return to work.

The stevedores are expected to return to work shortly, according to a company spokesman.
A look at 'equal time'

The Federal Communication Commission (FCC) is concerned at this time with its Fairness Doctrine or "equal time" concept in regard to political candidates. It seems admirable that an institution should concern itself with equal opportunity.

While organizations—church, state, education, etc.—appear to be neutral on the same concern. It is because of the lack of equal opportunity in government that government control passes no solution for the media.

Public testimony to his private

President Nixon was at television during his trips and in Russia, Democrats boasted that if it was a test of free time for political campaigning. When Senator McGovern was on television to explain his vice-presidency plans, the Republicans believed that he was campaigning and they should have equal time.

In television, production, the idea of "equal opportunity" long an ideal in our heritage, was carried to its logical extreme. In order that everyone have an equal opportunity, some people were handicapped.

An example was a T.V. woman host who had difficulty as he was wearing glasses that changed his good vision to be more like the vision of people. Another example was a spot where the dancers had sand bags attached to them. This made the ballerina very clumsy, but gave a more equal opportunity to those without the same grace. There were scenes where people who sat around and made sure people maintained their handicaps.

While everyone equal and equal opportunity may be admirable, it is not as important as it sometimes seems. As for personal reasons means a handicap to the lowest common denominator, it is not necessary. There are enough problems without everyone being created equal.

Come home, letters, George

When George McGovern began running for the Presidency early 1972, he struck those who knew he was a vice guy, a fairly honest politician, a man who vowed to serve everyone.

Well, a year and a half, 23 primaries and a national convention later, a lot of people's opinions of McGovern have changed. Who has become what a chance—albeit a slim one—of being elected the President. But he has done something to himself be changed by the pressures of success and politics.

But McGovern all year has operated partly because of his liberal positions on various issues, partly because of his winning personality, because of the depth of detail and his proposals.

You could almost say McGovern is a direct and frequently on the issue of the war in Indochina, that he spoke directly and passionately in this country and the world, that he dealt with the hard issue of trying to convert the American people, that he gave a more equal opportunity to those other and without being created equal.

In its qualified endorsement of McGovern in the Wisconsin primary, the Cardinal noted, "While other candidates and party leaders have assumed ambiguities, McGovern has been certain and definite. The frank exposition of his position, marked contrast to the tight-lipped attitude of his opponents, and the candor of McGovern's campaign is public testimony to his private integrity—a quality too long absent in American politicians."

But note that George McGovern has entered the final lap of the long race, the shining knight has vanished. He has accomplished the remarkable achievement of dropping 6 percentage points in the Gallup poll after the Democratic convention—a time when his support should have been widening.

Generally, this drop is attributed to the chance of the convention afternoon the Brigham Young. But it could be that a larger factor was the ever-more-obvious waffling on the issue of the Vietnam war.

The issue is a decision even before the convention was over—even on the very issue which has given McGovern his credibility—the war.

Since the convention, the war has only been a minor theme in McGovern's speeches. Granted, it gets mencin-tioned and the new commercials remind viewers that good old George was against the war way back then. Granted, in major newspapers across the nation yesterday McGovern added his opposition to the war. But his speeches have been for the locker-room variety—rah, rah, get behind me and let's go.

We would go far to get behind you, George, if you'd get back to the old cudgel, the detailing of positions, the speaking out on the tough issues and regain control of your campaign that we saw in the days of yore.

Get with it, George. If Richard Nixon is going to be looking for a new home in January, George McGovern is going to have to be clear— and credible—alternative. Until that begins to happen, it's going to be a long four years.

McGovern's campaign funds boosted by out-of-state businessmen

The letter mentions McGovern's record on issues such as health care, education, and defense. It highlights his support for policies that would benefit working-class Americans and the middle class. The letter seeks contributions from corporate executives and business owners who share these values.

McGovern's campaign has been relying heavily on contributions from wealthy individuals and small donors, but the senator is hoping to generate more support from large contributors.

The letter is being sent to a list of potential donors that includes people who have donated to McGovern in the past, as well as new prospects.

SCHWENGEL TAKES A STAND

FRED SCHWENGEL has been a consistent and vocal opponent of our military actions in Southeast Asia. During the 1970 sessions of Congress, FRED SCHWENGEL sponsored a bill calling for a halt to US involvement in Southeast Asia.

During this 97 session of Congress, FRED SCHWENGEL has been a strong supporter of the Civilian Act of "Viet Cong". I think this is a good idea."

SCHWENGEL has also criticized the secrecy and secrecy concerning the role of Southeast Asia, and its inevitable affect on the agriculture, civil rights, and trade balance.

In a letter to the President on August 18, 1974, SCHWENGEL said, "This is the largest war we have ever entered. It is fought in a country where only one of the people want us to. Our soldiers have come home from Vietnam in wounded bodies. Over 700,000 have not returned. We must do something to stop this madness."

Who makes the coffee?

When women speak about certain things they are often accused of being "picky" and "touchy," and women as a group are often accused of making demands. This is not the case. The problem is simply that women are not satisfied with what they get, and until they get what they want, they won't be satisfied. This is not a problem women are inventing; it is a problem women are experiencing. It is also not a problem that women are complaining about; it is a problem that women are forced to endure. This is not a problem women are inventing; it is a problem women are experiencing. It is also not a problem that women are complaining about; it is a problem women are forced to endure.

Women's work is always considered to be unimportant, and when women do something that is considered important, it is often done in a way that is considered unimportant. This is not a problem women are inventing; it is a problem women are experiencing. It is also not a problem that women are complaining about; it is a problem women are forced to endure. Bodies, briefcases, and birthdays

These year-old尚 bodies, making friends and meeting in the high triad. Green trees in watered, bright, and hard, and afternoons fromondon in champagne. Back to in wooded, sweet. So to in paper boats and floating in ice kegs. A briefcase filled with checkers supporting George McGovern, and a shoe to keep shoes and beans there. In top photo Vance Bourjaily, with garrard and gloves, serves refreshments to guests.

No urgency
It was a relaxing place to be, then there was a sense of freedom, no sense of urgency. People were experiencing one of the most beautiful moments of living. No sense of urgency existed, responsibilities were forgotten, and the crowd represented an unattached crew of new friends.

The core of the day was a reminder, a fresh face, a bottle of whiskey, and a briefcase filled with checkers supporting George McGovern. Many went for walks in the woods. Many just sat and watched others; some drank far and wide, and others walked to the farm pond in Iowa. A day with freedom; you felt as if you were living one of the more beautiful moments of living. No sense of urgency existed, responsibilities were forgotten.

Skogman: Year on bench was bothersome at first

BY TOWNSEND HOOPER, II

Sport Editor

You too? you’re a native of Cedar Rapids, are you? Maybe.

You started playing quarterback in junior high, right? Later, you switched to play on the high school football team. Did you have any problems adjusting to the change of scenery? When you got your first taste of Big Ten football, and you loved it, you realized that playing varsity football is a different experience.

Going down...

Skogman was listed on the number two quarterback spot in 1971, behind starter Frank Hookman. But that was a short-lived experience. Even though he never started, he was an integral part of the team. His leadership and determination showed through the games, further bolstering the team’s morale.

"All that pain. I brought my enthusiasm to the practice field and never let it go. And you know what? I continued to improve, further glassing the fans.

Skogman-until he was benched season. But you got a taste of and saw no Big Ten football, and you loved it. You took your licks as the Hawks posted a disappointing 3-6-1 four varsity contests under Coach Frank Lauterbur. Jo Dye and Tom John Campbell, defensive tackles Tyrone Dye and Tom John Campbell, from Scott School, were the best wide back on top of the list.

Their potential is still on the rise, says Bob Roberts. "We have a very good running back, the high one. He has some real speed on the field."

Adapting to college life is not easy, and it's not different for football players. However, the combination of hard work and dedication is essential. "We have to work hard to get the respect of the coaches and the fans," says Lauterbur. "It's not just a matter of being a good football player; it's also about being a good student."

Back on top

Give us some depth. Naturally, says Lauterbur, it's the mid-year powder, rather than physical strength, that makes a difference. When the wide back is not physically fit, it becomes difficult to carry on with the game.

Ginsberg's Jewelers

It's a matter of time and respect. If we take the time to train and prepare our athletes, we can be successful. "I have to throw over a shoulder. I have to throw over a film. It's a matter of practice."

FXL watches as Skogman passes

"Thinking of love, thinking of you."

When you’re ready... we’re ready. We have been for over 3 generations.

It's a perfect outfit," said Mark Fetter, coach of the offense.

All three players also expressed a feeling about football that is unique to college. "I have to throw over a shoulder. I have to throw over a film. It's a matter of practice."

"It's not in my plans to play professionally," said Skogman. "But I'm not going to give up football, even if it's just for a part of my life. It keeps me going."

Harris turns on to poetry

By BART ROSS
Sports Editor

There's a guy in Iowa named Dave Harris who's really big on poetry. Illustrated by a grad student in English, he will spend a lot of time talking about poetry and writing to help students who are interested in it. Harris's name is not a common one, but he's been working on the Iowa Daily for a year and a half now. He's been a great help to me and I hope he'll continue to be.

Improve athletic skill

By HEIDER GLIDAY

Your help is needed to organize the Women's Physical Education Department. We are looking for individuals who are interested in improving the athletic skills of women at the University of Iowa. The goal is to create a more active and healthy campus for all students.

Harris puts it this way: "I want to help people understand the joy of poetry. Poetry is a way of life, and I think it can help us all lead better lives." He's been invited to speak at several universities around the country, and his lectures are always well-attended.

The thing we particularly noticed was that the Iowa game was a highlight of our season.

Darling says, "I don't know how much it helped, but it convinced me that there is a very special relationship with each other." Craig, who has a "personal squad and a state tourney baseball team," has taken Christ as his "cornerstone." Craig has changed noticeably since high school. He has taken Christ as his "personal savior." That is, until he started going with Darling. He claims that when he started going with Darling, "it's funny, it's like I've never been in a normal relationship before-Iowa also lost by scores of 31-10.

Simms: Change Hawkeye fortunes

Dave Simms

BY ROBERT SHAW WlTER

"Winning is what it's all about. It's the only reason we're out here. I'd like to make a legacy that we turned the Iowa football program around."

The author of the above statement is Dave Simms, the new head coach at the University of Iowa. Simms' expertise lies in his ability to coach quarterbacks. With this background, he is well-equipped to handle the position during his first year with the Hawkeyes.

In fact, Simms is expected to make significant changes in the team's offensive strategy. He plans to implement a more aggressive and efficient passing game, utilizing the talents of his star quarterback, who will be the focal point of the team's attack.

Simms' decision to make changes is a reflection of his determination to improve the team's performance. He has already been working closely with the players, identifying areas where improvements can be made.

The team's improvement in the upcoming season is expected to be significant, as Simms has a clear vision for the squad and is committed to turning around the program. With his expertise and dedication, it's likely that the Hawkeyes will see a resurgence in the near future.

Purdue, Oct. 7

If pressure and heat produce a rolling Ballstoker, then Bob DeMoss will have a winner at Purdue this year. Purdue is again filled with a lot of talent and experience. Pre-season polls pick Purdue to finish near the top of the Big Ten.

But last last Saturday in Bowling Green (17-14) it might have been a freak upset, with talented people like Otis Armstrong, Gary Stoll, and Van Pelt the 致命的这 is Rusk. The Boilermakers from that date for Purdue was exactly the same. Purdue will be strong. But for the talent that is in camp, their two-wk record has been disappointing (1-2) for the last two years. But DeMoss can tell you about the pressure and heat.

Northwestern, Oct. 14

Northwestern lost 4 starters on defense and a handful on offense including the best passing combo in the Big Ten last year—Marlue Diagnose in Barry Pearson. Alex Agarstar...tang has seven years of experience with the Wildcats...ve been a streak-upset, with talented people like Otis Armstrong, Gary Stoll, and Van Pelt. Northwestern's offense of late has been lazy, but they've got the ingredients back to Gopher Gold. For the first time in seven years, Northwestern head coach, Bob Bailey, a senior and Mike Syed, a junior, will see a lot of the action. The defensive secondary will be the most experienced. Atlantic. White, Politano, and Randall are seniors that will be heard above the growing pains.

Michigan St., Oct. 28

The Spartans started the season on a winning note last Saturday when they were whipped previously with several huge plays by the Spartans. Bob Davis, 6-3½, optional head coach Daily Messenger's this season returned, "we have more people..." the closest we've had in years, to our great teams of 1965-66. "Jarrett's biggest concern is finding..." according to DeMoss. Listens for names like Burt's, McGarrhin and Van Elett.

Wisconsin, Nov. 4

Either the Badgers appear to have more problems or is a list of perennials double their game. Tt's one of the hardest..." Veer-T. Jacob..." "Wisconsin Defense Has Potential. But..." "Jear-...t's hard to pin Wisconsin's..." "the Big Ten..." "the..." Michigan State. Nov. 11

In three seasons Bo Schembechler has coached the Wolverines..." the quickest we've had in years. Against Wisconsin, the Badgers could improve and have a respectable season.

Indiana, Nov. 18

Looking at Indiana's starting offensive and defensive line..." there is a lot of experience in them this fall. Only one sophomore is in the starting line-up this year, Greg McGarrhin, "the younger guy..." Sophomore Joe Ellis, "fake..." "he is still growing." McGarrhin is 6-feet, 225 pounds.

A seasoned defense and a veteran backfield helped to get off to a good start last Saturday. Indiana came from behind to win over Minnesota in the season's opener 21-14. Poor class work cost Illinois defensive back Willie Lee Stoll, 6-feet, 220 pounds, the second leading rusher last year and defensive back Willie DeLator. Also soph offensive back Donny Perdue was declared ineligible by the NCAA over money matters.

Illinois, Nov. 25

Illinois won its last five games in '71. Things looked muddy and possibly deep until an academic bombshell hit the football team. Poor class work cost Illinois defensive back Willie Lee Stoll, 6-feet, 220 pounds, the second leading rusher last year and defensive back Willie DeLator. Also soph offensive back Donny Perdue was declared ineligible by the NCAA over money matters.
