President Nixon yesterday accepted the resignation of the two principal figures who have opposed his program of opening the borders of Cambodia to Americans. He also announced that he would name a new cabinet member, Lewis Strauss, as director of the Atomic Energy Commission.

The two aides who resigned were John Ehrlichman, Nixon's special assistant, and H. R. Haldeman, his chief of staff. Both aides are being investigated by the Senate Watergate committee.

Ehrlichman, in a letter to Nixon, said he was resigning "in order to allow the people of the United States to judge for themselves the full record of my conduct and the circumstances of my resignation." Haldeman, in a letter to the president, said he was resigning "in order to avoid distracting further the process of Government reforms that is already under way." Both men will be replaced by new cabinet members.

The resignation of Haldeman and Ehrlichman is the result of a week of intense political maneuvering by the White House. Nixon had refused to accept their resignations, but the resignations were announced after the Senate Watergate committee voted to call them to testify on their roles in the Watergate break-in.

The committee's decision was made after a televised hearing in which Ehrlichman and Haldeman made statements defending themselves. Both aides were accused of obstructing justice and concealing information from federal investigators.

Nixon had earlier refused to accept the resignations of Ehrlichman and Haldeman, but the Senate committee's decision to call them to testify on their roles in the Watergate break-in forced the president to accept their resignations.

Nixon's action was immediately condemned by a number of suburban newspapers. The Washington Post called it a "shameful" mistake. The Chicago Tribune said it was a "great mistake." The New York Times said it was a "disgraceful" mistake.

The resignations of Ehrlichman and Haldeman were announced at a press conference by the president.

In other political news, there were reports of a number of other resignations in the Nixon administration. Aides to Vice President Spiro Agnew have been accused of involvement in the Watergate break-in, and it is believed that he may be forced to resign.

A local councilman who has been a mainstay among topics considered for the next two years will be a major proposed study of criminal justice in Iowa, said.....

The Florida House and Senate have passed a bill that would allow police officers to use deadly force against people who are cut off from mental health services.

But the remaining residents of North Florida Farms, a housing complex for people with mental health issues, are not happy about the police officers who are due to arrive in the next few weeks.

Recently, an incident occurred where a mental health officer was accused of using excessive force against a resident. The police department has opened an investigation into the incident.

Navy, NASA planes collide

16 killed in mid-air crash

The Navy and NASA planes collided in mid-air, killing 16 people on board. The aircraft, which were carrying scientists on a mission to study space, were flying in close proximity when they collided.

Several people on the ground were also injured. The cause of the collision is under investigation.

The planes were part of a joint NASA-Navy project to study the effects of space travel on human bodies.

The accident has raised questions about the safety of space missions and the need for better coordination between the two agencies.

City charter committee debates spending in Iowa City elections

The Iowa City charter committee has been discussing how to allocate funds for the upcoming election. The committee is considering options such as increasing the budget for education or reducing the amount of money spent on advertising.

City council members are divided on the issue, with some wanting to increase spending on education and others concerned about the cost of advertising.

The works of Mougins are of very high quality, and the French government has preserved them in accordance with the artist's wishes. Only one condition was attached to the donation of paintings: that the picture should not be sold or be published posthumously as the Picasso Collection is a single volume of the artist's life. As well as the collection given to Denver, there are several thousand paintings, drawings, sketches, sculptor's works and other works of art from the public and private collections of the Picasso family to the works of Mougins of Picasso's own choice. The works of Mougins of Picasso's own choice have been concerned that the family may be allowed to remove a fixed copy in any piece made from them, perhaps producing a collapse in the Picasso family. The exhibition of the works of Mougins of Picasso's own choice should not be allowed because the family cannot allow its works to be exhibited. Property tax: let's reform it

Property taxes have many drawbacks to them in their present form. To mention just one fact that they have potential for being progressive, but currently they are extremely regressive. They are perhaps the most iniquitous and widespread type of tax in the United States. This was probably the reason why the move to get rid of them was being put out by them of calling for a "Flabby American." "American," by the way, who do exercise."

But that seems to be the way of the American system of government. As a basis for analyzing the generative motivation of the community which have never before been active as a group in this way. Consumers and farmers have been successfully fighting-grudgingly-for the right to make their own decisions as to what gets what share of the revenue. Sticky fingers abound. So, property taxes look like they're here to stay. Unfortunately these taxes are poorly administered and unfairly levied almost universally.

While landlords must pay high property taxes, they may not usually do so unless it be for exercise; 14 million report discloses. To equalled by the atrocities of depravity which might only be students are being assuming God-like mutants. experiments

A textbook called Economics by Daniel Fusfeld nicely sums up the problems surrounding property taxes. As Fusfeld points out, these taxes are the main form of revenue for local governments. No one has come up with a serious alternative to them. However, there is another approach that is only too "flabbily" American. It is to try to get rid of property taxes. The idea is that property taxes are not progressive, but actually progressive, if one looks at them in the long run. Farmers have no incentive to whom they might pay off their property taxes. Instead, consumers pay part of these taxes through higher prices for food. The most serious problem with property taxes is that they are not progressive. What results in low taxes on undeveloped land is that it is more likely to be sold at a high price to people who want to build homes. Therefore the costs of building these homes soar and the housing shortage remains.

Local government would benefit from taxing undeveloped land at a higher rate than the additive revenue this would bring in. In addition, speculation would be discouraged and both urban sprawl and housing prices would be reduced.

It is clear that property tax practices should be reformed. This has proven to be a difficult task, however, due to the heavy influence of real estate interests in local government. A change for the better appears to be in the offing, unless there is united action by citizens to do something about it.

Early this month, John Lennon made perhaps his last appeal in avoid being deported from this country as a threat to "national security." Imagine no political repression. Imagine."

Food for thought

The meal boycott—aside from being the media's consumer story of the year—was, predictably, a singular failure in effecting any change in meat prices. But as a new voice of protest, as a prediction of things to come, and as a basis for analyzing the pricing structure, the boycott was a success.

First, the boycott and the prices that caused it stimulated the assertion of political pressure from segments of the community which have never before been active as a group in this way. Consumers and farmers have been successfully fighting-grudgingly—for the right to make their own decisions as to what gets what share of the revenue. Sticky fingers abound. So, property taxes look like they're here to stay. Unfortunately these taxes are poorly administered and unfairly levied almost universally.
Survey shows rise in college costs

Ivy walls: not so cheap

NEW YORK (AP) — The cost of attending college rose an average of less than 1 percent during the last two years, according to a report from the National Study of Education Finances released Thursday.

A nationwide survey by the board's College Scholarship Service revealed that the average cost for a four-year college rose about 1 percent, to $17,645, while the average cost for a two-year college rose about 1 percent, to $11,380. The survey found that the average cost of a college education can range from $8,900 for community colleges to public colleges to private colleges.

The survey also indicated that students who take more time to complete their degrees spend more than those who complete their degrees in four years.

Internationals plan April fest

The University of Iowa's international Association will hold an international fair April 17.

According to festival organizing Abshar Urmish, the goal of the festival is "to expose international students to the local college and living situations." Among the booths that will be on hand will be 15-20 traditional foreign dance groups and a booth from Iowa State University.

Another fun feature will be a "free globe," which will feature each country's different culture.

The festival will be from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m., and will also be at the Prairie View.

More May grads, liberal arts lagging

Applications for admission to the University of Iowa next fall are up, but liberal arts is not offering as many as before.

ABC Associate Editor Bill Brown says that the number of previous university student's expectations of the cost of AIB is not a major factor.

For example, when Brown asked the AIB leaders to develop a plan for this annual fair event, one said: "It's not our job," one student said. "It's not our job." The following is a list of the people who were involved in this event: PREPARE your work. Remember for the week. Call universal for those travel arrangements. 354-2424.

Chicano theater reflects social reality

IT MAY NOT BE Broadway... but there are those who believe that Chicano theater is going all out to prove otherwise. In September, for instance, Iowa City's Fieldhouse provided space for the opening of the Chicano theater production of "Teatro." The event was an attempt by many people interested in the area to use the gymnasium as an opportunity to showcase Chicano theater and do something for the benefit of the Chicano people.

The origin of the Chicano theater began with Carlos Valdez. He founded the first theater in Chicano, and since that time a number of Chicano groups have been organized throughout the country.

The uniqueness of Chicano plays, or acts, comes from the use of a number of individual artists as a result of the industry. Often the plays are not written, rather, they are created and written throughout a group. A very talented person in his or her own right.

Survival Line suggests that all those interested in specific courses or workshops that are not currently offered may request them. The University of Iowa has many many people interested in the facilities of the university. As a result, we are sure that the Fieldhouse will give the matter the attention it deserves.

Survival Line linked with Gary Allen, the International Students Student Officer. Allen's areas include the area of language, Spanish, and require people to find someone in the Iowa area who speaks Spanish. Survival Line is just one of those women that will be glad to help those who make requests.

Steel Yard Blues

Steel Yard Blues is a film that producers feel will be a great film. The producers, however, feel that the production will never be shown. Despite their efforts the film was released.

The film, Steel Yard Blues, features the legendary singer and songwriter, John Lee Hooker. Hooker is known for his powerful voice and his ability to captivate an audience with his music. The film is a celebration of his music and his life. The producers hope that the film will be a success and will help to bring Hooker's music to a wider audience.

Despite the film's negative reviews, Hooker remains dedicated to his craft. He continues to perform and record music, and his influence on the blues genre continues to be felt.

The film is set in the early 1900s, and it tells the story of a young man who becomes involved in the steel workers' union. The film explores themes of class struggle, race, and labor. The film's director is a well-known film director, and his previous works have been critically acclaimed.

The film has received mixed reviews, with some critics praising the performances and the direction, while others have criticized the film's pacing and the use of historical material. However, the film has been nominated for a number of awards, including the Academy Award for Best Picture.

Overall, Steel Yard Blues is a powerful and poignant film that explores important themes of the time. The film's strong performances and direction make it a must-see for anyone interested in the history of the steel industry or the history of the blues genre.

The Iowa varsity teams began bringing up its expectations last weekend as the Hawkeyes, quadrangulars and hopes to keep the team alive in the two Big Ten meets this weekend.

The Hawkeyes travel to Madison, Wis., this weekend. With forged to face the undefeated Wisconsin Badgers. It will be the third time in seven weeks the Badgers have met the Hawkeyes.

Iowa was all of three its five meet results in Madison, including its initial Big Ten win of the year. The Badgers defeated Iowa, 121-65 at Ohio State.

Iowa will be Ohio, 64-64, but those numbers could mean trouble since Iowa in match Wisconsin’s long streak of seven straight meets this weekend.
