Martha Mitchell, a former New York Times reporter, was among those news organizations who confirmed as correct the reports of espionage on behalf of the Republican Party last year by Democratic protégés.

Grassy said Thursday there is no one in political history who could approve of a system of national espionage that is widely accepted.

The Espionage Act of 1917 was passed by Congress as a means of suppressing political espionage at the time of World War I. It was amended in 1937 to include the Espionage Act of 1938, which expanded the Act's definition to include espionage for the benefit of any foreign nation.

County officials have been asked to provide necessary information about the Espionage Act, which is currently under review.

Grassy said Thursday that the Espionage Act is an important tool in the prevention of espionage and that the Act should be kept in place.

When you know it's for keeps

When one knows that a situation is for keeps, they are more likely to be diligent in their efforts to maintain the situation.

In this case, the Espionage Act provides a means to prevent espionage and maintain national security.

Grassy said Thursday that the Espionage Act is a vital tool in the prevention of espionage and that it should be kept in place.

Kent State—3 years later

On April 30, 1970, Richard Nixon formally announced that he was expanding the Vietnam War into Cambodia to "end the war." In the following announcement, four students were murdered at Kent State University, near Akron, Ohio. The state—quite frankly—was "in a state of siege."

The illegal war—and the unconstitutional prosecution of people—continued.

Business as usual. Revelations by Mr. Lai, Attica, Augusta, Southern University, Mayday III, Haiphong mines, wage freezes that failed, ITT deals, campaign funds, bombing for peas, hooking intimate, executive privilege simply bring a list.

On April 30, 1973, Richard Nixon got on his knees to beg forgiveness of any harm he had attributed to his staff and campaign committee. He said the responsibility lies with him. He said that basically, he was an honest man. Nixon, the majority of politicians are good, honest people.

The law of averages, then, who was his office was filled with such. And one wonders what acts beyond the Watergate spying, Jimmy Hoffa purdah pack, Elkhorn medical record theft allegations will never reach the public's ears.

Democratic congregouses are right when they worry about the constitutional crises. Their charges have not yet even scraped the surface of the monolithic animal that basically the vast majority of politicians are good, honest people.

 Those four white kids got gunned down three years ago. In the aftermath of his announcement, four students were entered his mouth and exited confrontation that day. The bullet killed Sandy。

They didn't have to make it. They didn't have to kill. But they did. They were einfachexistent. They were the butt of the joke. But they were caught, and now they sit in jail.

Clark MacGregor, chief of Nixon's White House staff, and a key figure in the Watergate cover-up, has been sentenced to three years in prison. The sentence was handed down by District Judge Thomas P. Griesa, who fined MacGregor $5,000 and ordered him to pay restitution to the government for his role in the Watergate scandal.

The sentence was the result of a plea bargain, in which MacGregor agreed to plead guilty to one count of conspiracy to obstruct justice and one count of perjury. He had been accused of lying to a grand jury investigating the Watergate scandal.

But the Watergate scandal is far from over. The case continues to be a matter of intense public interest and concern.

The Watergate scandal, which began with the break-in at the Democratic National Committee headquarters in the Watergate complex on June 17, 1972, has resulted in the resignation of President Richard Nixon and the indictment and conviction of many high-ranking government officials.

The trial of MacGregor, who served as counsel to the President during the Watergate period, began in late 1972 and lasted for months. During the trial, the jury heard testimony from over 40 witnesses and viewed thousands of documents.

The Watergate scandal has been the subject of numerous books and articles, and has been the subject of a number of television documentaries and film adaptations.

If you had signed a contract with the University in the interest that you would find a job upon satisfactory completion of the Hospital and Health Administration program, then we might suggest you go for legal advice. However, we know students do not sign contracts with the University without some counseling. This is a new policy of the University, we will be the first to produce it, so it would be most beneficial if it were to stay.

SURVIVAL Line with John Riley, an interest in Hospital and Health Administration, Riley referred to the "University's" interest that has implications for colleges around the country, concerning graduates and that they don't receive the interest that they deserve for job opportunities. There is no formal process of job placement. They attempt to help students individually and as they come to them for assistance.

Riley suggested that if you are being told that you are getting a job upon graduation, contact someone at the Department's career center. He also noted that if you might try.

City asks Rock Island to rebuild all crossings

Iowa City's longstanding dispute with the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad Company (CRIP) over rough street crossings may be nearing an end.

City Atty. Jay H. Honohan has sent a proposal settlement to the railroad on a series of city suggestions to improve safety of the crossings. The city is waiting for the railroad's response.

The city's proposal would seek additional funds to improve the crossings. Honohan said the city still wanted the railroad to front some of the cost of the improvements.

According to an informal survey conducted by Bill Ridderick, at least 14 percent of all downtown drivers made turns at the crossings and 12 percent of all downtown residents made turns at the crossings. However, some drivers did not stop in the rain.

Shock treatment convulsions 'help emotionally ill'

Editor's Note: EST, better known as shock therapy, has long been a mystery to the general public. Dr. Paul Huston, a former Iowa City psychiatrist, told the press today that he passed out three Iowa City psychiatrists about the "myth" behind the public fear of EST and how shock therapy is used.

By JALAYNE SMELDEW

Shock therapy is performed by the backboard method or the neckback method. In the backboard method a highly volatile gas is administered in large quantities to bring about a convulsion in the patient. Convulsions are induced in the patient by the injection of a drug or by electrical stimulation of the brain.

Dr. Paul Huston said that shock therapy is used to treat patients who cannot be helped by other treatments. The patient is placed in a restraining chair and given a large dose of a drug that will cause convulsions. The drug is usually given intravenously.

One of the most common drugs used in shock therapy is the tranquilizer chlorpromazine. This drug is given in large doses to produce a state of deep anesthesia. The patient may be unconscious for several minutes after receiving the drug.

The patient's mouth is closed and a gag is placed in the mouth to prevent swallowing during the convulsion. The patient is then administered a large dose of the drug intravenously.

In the neckback method, a large dose of the drug is given intravenously. The patient is then placed in a restraining chair and a large dose of the drug is given intravenously.
