Regent tuition hike expected

Norpol: If students can't pay extra $50, they shouldn't go to school

The University of Iowa regents are expected to vote Wednesday to increase tuition at least $50 for the coming academic year, according to Robert Boyd, the university's vice president for business and finance. Boyd said the regents will be asked to approve a tuition increase of $50 per credit hour, which would bring the total tuition for a full-time student to $525 for the fall semester.

The regents are scheduled to meet Wednesday at 9 a.m. in the Union Ballroom on the Iowa City campus. The meeting is open to the public, and the public is invited to attend.

According to Boyd, the tuition increase is needed to help offset the university's budget deficit, which is expected to be around $10 million for the fiscal year ending June 30. The tuition increase is also expected to help offset the cost of other expenses, such as faculty salaries and benefits.

The regents are expected to vote on the tuition increase during their regular meeting. The meeting is open to the public, and the public is invited to attend.

Amendment would divert student fees

by SYLVIA M. MILLER

An amendment to the Board of Regents budget that would redistribute one of the funds used by students to pay for activities and programs that now fund basic education will be considered by the Iowa Legislature by Rep. Boyd for his consideration. Any plan recommended by the Staff Council members, in a detailed report of the Staff Council, which has been requested by the administration, will be presented to the university committees.

The potential is there to divert the effectiveness of the Student Council, said doing away with areas of personal services, student benefits and staff projects presently controlled by the Student Council. The proposed amendment would divert the student fee from the Student Council.

Students run orientation

Whether they come from South Sioux City or South Omaha, the incoming student doesn’t seem to have too many questions at Summer Orientation 1979. Although for many students and last year’s trainees, this annual event was expected and, well—expected. But among the highlights of this year’s training session were the many groups of volunteers who worked with students interested in learning about campus. As usual, every current group used its own techniques to attract attention, but the most effective were the unions, who spread their message by giving questions about labor-landlord conflicts.

new in OEO

WASHINGTON, D.C.—One of the first appointments that Nixon made after he was reelected president was the creation of a new Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO) program. This was done in an effort to change part of the old structure remain—its "community direction" and reinvigoration of "what works." This new program, the Community Development Corporation, is an outgrowth of the social services that OEO provided and will be under the direction of Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, Robert C. Weaver.

While OEO has not yet made a clean break with the way of doing things, it is clear that this is the start of a new direction for the agency. The new program is expected to be a more effective way of providing services to the people who need them.

One of the goals of the OEO has been to use its resources to help the poor. With the creation of the Community Development Corporation, the OEO will be able to reach a larger number of people with its services. The new program is expected to be even more successful in providing services to the poor.

Overall, the creation of the Community Development Corporation is expected to be a positive development for the OEO and for the people who need its services. With the new program, the OEO will be able to continue its work of helping the poor and providing services to those who need them.

Nostalgia, mythic heroes in Huston film

By ANDREW BALZ

Judging by the fact that all the lines of the film were given to the main character, and by the fact that the main character is the one who makes all the decisions, it is clear that the film is not really about the politics of the situation. It is about the personal, private lives of the characters, and the way they live their lives. The film is a study of the human condition, and of the way we deal with the moral dilemmas that confront us in our daily lives. It is a story of love, of loss, of hope, and of despair. It is a story of the human spirit, and of the way we struggle to find meaning in the world around us.

Watergate coverage: sporadic excellence

On one of the nights that a segment of Watergate news was covered, the evening news had a segment about tornado damage in Ohio. These shots of destroyed houses and people who lost their homes were moving in all the right directions. But if you listen to the commentary, you can hear the news people saying, "This is Watergate, this is Watergate," as if the Watergate case is certainly more important to this country, than the erosion of homes and the loss of lives.

There have been stories that are essentially soap opera. One of the minor side-effects of the Watergate coverage has been the increased number of news stories about weather conditions. One of the minor side-effects of the Watergate coverage has been the increased number of news stories about weather conditions.

But basically, television has sold us a soap opera. I don't think it would come over well on television; not come over well on television; not come over well on television; not come over well on television.

The evening program included a segment about tornado damage in Ohio. These shots, of course, were not taken until the next day. The majority interested in soap opera. The Entertainer

The current production at the UI Repertory Company is the British play "The Entertainer," written by John Osborne in 1957. The play is set in a music hall in England and portrays the life of a down-and-out performer, Archie Rice, and his family. The production is directed by Steve Pudenz, who has directed several previous productions at the company.

Bomberg halt amendment faces action

WASHINGTON (AP) — An amendment to a bill that could end milk and gas subsidies to keep the price of milk and gasoline below the price of crude oil was being studied by the Senate when Congress adjourned for the July Fourth recess.

The measure would give the government the right to negotiate with oil companies to limit their gasoline prices and with dairy farmers to limit their milk prices. The measure was introduced by Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., and Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

The measure could face a tough battle in the House of Representatives when it is considered later this month.

The measure would prohibit the government from negotiating with oil companies to limit their gasoline prices and with dairy farmers to limit their milk prices. The measure was introduced by Rep. James Oberstar, D-Minn., and Rep. John M. Ashcroft, D-Mo.
