Prime interest rates rise, stock market falls

NEW YORK (AP)--Large bond buyers in 10 major cities were girding for the possibility of an interest-rate rise Monday, responding to inflationary pressures by moving them into safer investments. The increases appeared to signal the beginning of a tightening of monetary policy.

Inflationary pressures have increased as consumers, businesses and investors hurried to spend money before higher interest rates are imposed as early as this week by Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur F. Burns.

In addition, the National Association of Securities Dealers in New York issued a warning to brokers and dealers not to buy stock in any firm that increased its dividend rate.

The warnings were issued after a meeting with the Federal Reserve Board.

The increases appeared to signal the beginning of a tightening of monetary policy.

Investment bankers said Monday that while the White House was not in consultation with Congress over the possibility of a rate increase, the United States was moving closer to the rate this year.

The move to raise interest rates from the current 5 1/2 percent and the Federal Reserve's decision to tighten monetary policy against inflation have been a concern for many investors.

A University of Iowa in-state student who was listed on the mailing list of the chapter was chosen to receive a check driven after allegedly driving the car of another student. A check for a sum of $50 was issued to the student.

Ray added that he would have been offered assurance that the chapter would continue to be treated in the same manner as any other student organization. The motion was seconded by Sen. Maloney and carried by a vote of 7-11-7.

Governor Ray comments on recent UI tuition hike

The proposed plan for the Daily Iowan, which was introduced to the Graduate Student Senate at its last meeting, was approved by a vote of 7-11-7.

The proposed tuition increase was approved by the Board of Regents because of its impact on the state's budget. The increase will take effect in the fall of 1974, with a 5% increase in tuition for in-state students and a 10% increase for out-of-state students.

The UI Student Senate has been working on the issue of the increase for several weeks, and the proposal was presented to the UI council on Tuesday. Ray added that he would make sure that the increase is tied to the overall inflation rate, and that the increase would not exceed the rate of inflation.

Bargain stores attract students

By JOHN DUGLEWICZ
Staff Writer

Someday you'll be paying $500 for "unoccupied space," or more frequently "vacant lot." The day before you do it, you'll be watching a real estate grandauction on a slick and hooved television set, probably torched, bagged, or otherwise eliminated after a spring cleaning or garage sale.

From random TV sets to three-legged roaches, most of the household furniture found in Washington departments of the most frequent bargain hunters would probably be banned by the county welfare law.

But Goddard Furniture is hardly what one would call a department store. Each item has been sent through a factory employing handpicked personnel, and a well-lighted and clean stock room.

"We get all types of paramours nowadays," says Leon Ziegler, "some of 'em are friendly, but you can tell who aren't shopping here because they have cars." Students complete a large share of Goodwill's patronage. The store is open every day for business.

President will speak out after Watergate hearings

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) - President Nixon will speak out on the Watergate crisis sometime during this week, White House officials announced yesterday.

But Nixon will not appear before the Watergate grand jury, Ziegler said.

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) - President Nixon will speak out on Watergate after the impeachment proceedings begin.

"Somebody Cares," a new size of the "Somebody Cares" magazine, is being distributed.

According to saleswoman Ruth Lauderbaugh, "Anyone carrying home the body of the slain pilot during the 1967 Israeli-Arab war."

Ziegler was representing the White House when in a recent interview he described Dean as "a crooked guy." Ziegler said that Nixon was "speaking as an expert on the White House."

Ziegler said that Nixon was the one who made the decision by Balducci about what to do.

Ziegler reiterated that Nixon had not ordered the Watergate grand jury to investigate the Watergate grand jury investigation, reporting the Watergate investigations that such an appearance would be constitutionally improper.

Ziegler's announcement that Nixon will speak out on Watergate after the impeachment proceedings begin was the first time that the White House has said that the President will reply to Senate investigators.

"I'm not going to stuff a few dollars in the pocket," said Lauderbaugh, "I'm going to make sure that I get the right price."
Secret meetings are 'ludicrous'

On March 7 of this year, the House of Representatives passed a bill that many people believed to be an historic step closer to closing the gap.

The bill, referred to as the anti-secret society rule, calls for House members to open their doors to the public. But, as in most cases, there was a lot of talk around the bill. If a majority of the committee members vote in public to close the doors, the bill will die.

Most of the House committees have opened their bill-drafting sessions to the public, but according to Congresswoman Ruth Conyers—a national citizens organization—the powerful Ways and Means Appropriations committees continue to do their work in secret.

The House Appropriations Committee, one of the most powerful in Congress, has been doing all of its bill-drafting behind closed doors. When the bill was passed, it had held six closed sessions for bill drafting. Only one session was open, and that was for a proforma vote. The bill was then held over after it was drafted in closed session.

Also, eight of nine bill-drafting sessions of Appropriations subcommittees have been secret. Most of the significant work on appropriations is done in the 13 subcommittees.

The other House money committees, Ways and Means, held two sets of closed-meeting—one on a national deficit bill and another on a routine bill to extend an old law allowing the government to renegotiate excessive profits from defense contractors.

On June 8 the committee took its most important pro-secrecy vote of the year. It decided 15-15 to close all its bill-drafting sessions on President Richard Nixon's foreign trade legislation proposal.

The committee, however, was only interested in secrecy that served its needs. While it voted to exclude the public, the press and even present staff aides from the meetings, it allowed Nixon Administration personnel to remain behind the closed doors to "consult" on the legislation. The consultation was in a separate secret session.

Other secret meetings have bordered on the ridiculous. One of the more unique occasions was the hearings of the House Intelligence Committee in this category. On April 11 it met in secret session to draft the bill to give security clearance hearings to the Voice of America's Group's Voice of America workers who heard on the news that their jobs were in jeopardy. They would be closed to the public. As if this were bad enough, the committee held its secret session without taking the required public vote of committee members to close its doors. This is nothing more than a rubber-stamping of the votes.

There are probably times when secrecy is necessary, but these times are very few. In fact, the reason for justifying closed meetings has been to quickly get to rest.

Those in favor of closed-door sessions say that open meetings would allow employees to make plans that could take up to as much as three times longer. They add that with "all the press downtown" present, the meetings would be "hard to lock down for hours" if the meetings were open to the public.

But the evidence does not bear out these fears. Figures compiled by the Committee for Industrial Organizations, the group that sponsored the bill in 1971 show the same committee activity even if the meetings were open to the public. This was a noticeable period because it was the first year of a new Congress.

The charges that some committees don't submit to open meetings are denouncing the right of the American people to know what is going on in government. They are fighting for their right to see in the face of the people who put them in office.

Perhaps the best perspective on the whole issue was put forth by a member of the board of regents at the University of Iowa Iowa City. She said it was an occasion where university insurance would be the new ones, and that it was the leadership. It did not make it clear that this was the first chance that they had not given another chance.

Because of the lack of any real increase in the number of people who have been going into government jobs, the House is able to give itself the amount of money it needs to do its job. If the workers were given a chance to hold over the jobs of the day, they would be getting great documentation and money that is needed to make the government work.

It was the beginning of the Free Press and the House of Representatives. In the long run, this is the best way to get the money that we need to keep the government running.

Rain, high winds hammer Iowa

The wind saw the roof off the Bryson Seed Co. in Ames and righted it on a tree just across the street. It also ripped a stop sign from the top of a utility pole in Des Moines.

The wind and rain caused at least 20 million dollars worth of damage across Iowa, and the bill is expected to rise as the cleanup continues.

In Des Moines, the Des Moines Municipal Airport was closed to the city, and closed to the airport.

The National Weather Service in Des Moines said a high wind warning had been issued for the Des Moines metropolitan area, including Altoona, Altoona, and Altoona.

The wind and rain caused the Des Moines Municipal Airport to be closed to the city, and closed to the airport.

The winds caused damage across the state, and reports of damaged windows and roofs were common.

The wind and rain caused a collective fund to be established by the state to help recover from the damage.

County office locations sought

The state is looking to establish a new county office location in Des Moines, and the area is expected to be ready by the end of the year.

The new location is expected to be more accessible and better equipped to handle the needs of the county.

County officials are expected to meet with the state to discuss the new location and its potential impact on the county.

I'M OK—YOU'RE OK
Americas #1 Bestseller
Changing The Lives Of Millions!

It's probably the most important question you'll ever have to answer. Because right now—whether you're aware of it or not—all the relationships with the most important people in your life are strongly influenced by your behavior of how you feel about yourself (OK or not OK) and what you think of them (again, OK or not OK).

I'M OK—YOU'RE OK is the product of Doctor Harris's pioneering efforts in the field of Transactional Analysis—efforts that have already revolutionized therapy procedures throughout the world. After helping countless numbers of people help themselves establish mature, healthy relationships, he has translated startling theories into easily-understood language and adapted key ingredients of successful behavior change into practical advice. The result is a remarkable book that has already helped millions of hardcover readers lead more effective lives.
