Kissinger ordered to seek U.N. solution to new war

The President has now instructed the Secretary of State and the Secretary of Defense to seek a U.N. solution to the new war that has broken out in South Vietnam. The President has also told the Secretary of State to confer with members of the Security Council to discuss the situation.

Newsday since July. Fines for all offenses

The news has been that since July, fines for all offenses in the United States have been increased. This is to be expected as the government continues to try to balance its budget. However, the increase is significant and may have an impact on the economy.

Arab-Israeli conflict continues

The conflict between Arab and Israeli nations continues, with both sides claiming victories. The situation is complex and involves multiple factors, including political, social, and economic issues.

70s

The 1970s was a decade of change and turbulence, marked by significant social and political events. It was a time of protest, revolution, and change for many people around the world.

Rain

This month's "William Jennings Bryan Memorial" was sponsored by the City of Atlanta, and the weather was reported as rainy. The event was held at a local park, and attendees enjoyed the rain.

City changes wording on parking tickets

Parking fines are no longer doubled if not paid within 24 hours. This change was made to simplify the process and make it easier for people to understand.

Less revenue

Proponents of the new change argue that it will increase revenue for the city. However, opponents argue that it will make it more difficult for people to pay their fines, leading to more revenue lost.

Violations office

Last Tuesday the City Council took the first step towards implementing the parking fine collection system by passing an ordinance. This is a significant step towards improving the city's parking system.

Student lobbyists being recruited

By MAUREEN CONNORS

University of Iowa student lobbyists hope to enlarge their numbers in order to pressure their elected representatives to support their causes.

The Student Legislative Caucus (SLC) is a student organization which will send representatives to the Iowa Legislature next January.

Rumors of a split in the caucus have been circulating recently, as the organization tries to expand its membership.

The SLC has been in existence for several years, and has traditionally provided a forum for students to voice their opinions and interests in state and local politics.

However, the organization has faced challenges in recent years, including questions about its effectiveness and the extent to which it represents the interests of all students.

Herrick wins LASSA office

The results of the Liberal Arts Student Association (LASSA) elections were announced Tuesday evening when voting for student representatives was held.

Gary W. Lawler, a sophomore in political science, was elected to the position of president.

Lawler, a member of the Liberal Arts Student Association, ran on a platform of increasing student involvement in campus affairs.

"I believe that students should be more involved in the decision-making process," Lawler said. "I want to work with other student leaders to make sure that student voices are heard."
Congress needs to look at powers

The Congress of the United States has let it be known that they will no longer tolerate U.S. forces in Laos. Congressmen on both sides of the aisle have said that the Pentagon and the State Department have so far resisted the upset Asian politicians. While the anti-homogenizing amendment that went into effect on April 15 might significantly reduce the flow of new fighting, it does not prevent the U.S. from engaging in the kind of "sanctions building" that originally drew us into Indochina a decade ago.

The Congress is particularly concerned with two aspects of the U.S. proposals to bolster domestic order. The first, sponsored by the Agency for International Development, is the Public Safety Program. Last year the United States taught police methods to foreign nations at the cost of $85 million on this program. The other, concerning the work of the Economic Support Fund, depends more on the U.S.'s own needs than anything else. But both are put together in some way to make military support a part of the economic offering. Boni Yarbrough, and 46 per cent believe the President's special forces in the Philippines is the single worst program that has ever been supported.

Editorial response

To the Editor:

To reply to Anne Margot's description of "Congress's lack of action," I would like to present a few facts of the situation. Of course, Congress makes much more money and has more influence than the average citizen, so perhaps they have some other reason than the obvious one, which is to prevent any loss of face or credibility.

The Pentagon says that Special Forces still work with the Philippines armed forces in this area, and that in 1973 there was a "counter-urban training" program, using the U.S. Army's soldier training and support forces. Any use of U.S. armed forces in the Philippines has been authorized by Congress, with the exception of a 72-day Presidential decision.

Motorcyclists take heed

Let us set up a few points about your motorcyclist who died last year near a factory, and perhaps reflect, as well, what will happen in one way or another to the person who was reading this. That may be a bit of a stretch for those of you who are not into this. First you pull out the little boys and make sure that you can get out of the sudden pinch. Second, you must make sure of your ability to leave your home in safety and control. And third, you must make sure that you are not about to lose control.

To consider the motorcyclist's personal choices, you need to know that the United States has a total of 36,000 fatalities on the roads each year. Of these cases, 40 per cent are motorcycle riders. These injuries are caused by a variety of factors, including the speed of the motorcycle, the type of road it is on, the weather conditions, and the driver's skill in operating the vehicle. However, the most common cause of motorcycle fatalities is the driver losing control of the motorcycle due to speed or improper braking.

If you ask someone what they think is the most important factor in motorcycle safety, you will probably hear them say "speed." However, speed is only one of several factors that contribute to motorcycle fatalities. Other important factors include the type of road the motorcycle is on, the weather conditions, and the driver's skill in operating the vehicle.

The most important factor in motorcycle safety is the quality of the road. The type of road the motorcycle is on is a major factor in determining the likelihood of a motorcycle accident. The more rugged and uneven the road, the greater the chance of a crash. In addition, the type of surface the road is made of can also affect the likelihood of a crash. For example, gravel or dirt roads are more slippery than paved roads, making it more difficult to control the motorcycle.

Another important factor in motorcycle safety is the weather. Wet or slippery roads can make it more difficult to control the motorcycle and increase the risk of a crash. In addition, strong winds or heavy rain can make it more difficult for the rider to see and hear other traffic.

The type of motorcycle is also a factor in motorcycle safety. Motorcycles with less powerful engines are generally cheaper and easier to ride than more powerful motorcycles. However, they are also more likely to crash because they are less capable of handling quick changes in direction or terrain.

Finally, the driver's skill in operating the vehicle is also a major factor in motorcycle safety. Experienced riders are less likely to crash than inexperienced riders because they are better able to react to unexpected situations. In addition, drivers who take classes to improve their riding skills are more likely to avoid dangerous situations.

In conclusion, motorcycle safety is a complex issue that is influenced by a variety of factors. By understanding these factors, you can make more informed decisions about your motorcycle riding and take steps to reduce the risk of a crash.
Prices drop abroad

WASHINGTON (AP) - Retail food prices in 24 world capitals generally went down last month from mid-summer peaks, indicating substantial declines for chicken, steak and London's Broadcasting Corp., the U.S. Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

“Retail and wholesale prices of chicken may give a hint of future price drops,” the Foreign Agricultural Service said.

Prices compiled, released by the U.S. agricultural attachment abroad, showed another drop—of nearly one of the national indicators—of 1c a similar decline of 0.2 percent from mid-August. That month prices in half the cities were above these levels.

The prime reports are reviewed periodically by the agency. Sunday’s figures were received this week from officials of stores around the world.

In July, the median price of chicken was 31c per pound. Shoppers in Washington, D.C., paid 31c. A 5-pound chicken was $1.29 in September. The median price of chicken was 85c per pound.

In Washington, D.C., $2.09 per pound was paid for a 20-pound chicken. Japan’s chicken price was slightly higher—$2.15 per pound in Tokyo, up from 2.00 in July in 1972.

Average incomes were about 20 of 10 cents per pound. Londoners were 4c per pound in July.

Shoppers in Rome paid 60c per pound by department from the 60c reported in July. Shoppers in Rome paid 60c per pound by department from the 60c reported in July.

The report began compiling retail food prices abroad this year to help illustrate comparisons for the NATO administration that American consumers in relation to incomes pay more for food than any in the world.

Minnesota Orchestra superbly executes tricks of Mozart, difficulties of Ives

By GARRY BOWELL

Even before it plays a note, a composition of music by a northern European mind that really animates, all kinds of attention descend on the Minnesota Orchestra. For this, not only are we of the audience, who have ever heard it before, but also as a nucleus for whose work inspires the world. The musicians at work today, and the audience who will be there tomorrow, all need to know it, and so the orchestra stands in the footlights. Each piece is a perfect example of how music can be used to animate the world, and the Minnesota Orchestra deal
the perfect blow.

The program opened with the first movement of Mozart’s E-flat major symphony. The first movement seemed easier and less far than the second, in which the title says it, but some beauty in the baroque symphony, much of it new.

Mozart’s music is full of little slices of human emotion, and these little melodies are brought out. I coveted a lot of music, and also the perfect weather and the perfect weather. And from the opening of Mozart’s symphony, the Minnesota Orchestra proved its worth on a superb level.

Welles' film illustrates trauma of nearly poor

By ADOLPH HALAL Film Writer

Great Wells is an incredibly successful film, and with justifiable achievements in its story line and acting. It is a story line that is universally recognized as a classic, both then and now. The film has not been accorded the same degree of critical acclaim as some of his later works, but they are still highly respected and increasingly regarded as important films.

"The Magnificent Ambersons" (1942) which opened at the Union Theatre on "case" is ahead to a broader perspective. Based on the story of the family in the novel "The Ambersons" by Booth Tarkington, it is about a family dealing with the effects of the Great Depression. The story line of "The Magnificent Ambersons" is one of the most successful of its time, as it delves into the personal and social lives of the characters.

"Citizen Kane" (1941) is another famous film, directed by Orson Welles. It is a black-and-white film that tells the story of Charles Foster Kane, the wealthy newspaper magnate who is the owner of the publishing company "The New York Times". The film is directed by Orson Welles, who also wrote the screenplay and played the lead role.

"The Lady from Shanghai" (1947) is another classic film that was directed by Orson Welles. It is a drama film that tells the story of a man (played by Orson Welles) who tries to clear his name after being accused of murder.

"The Big Sleep" (1946) is a film noir directed by Howard Hawks, which is based on the novel by Raymond Chandler. The film stars Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall as detectives solving a murder mystery.

"Brando" (1969) is a documentary film about Marlon Brando, directed by Michael Roemer. It explores Brando's life and career, and includes interviews with friends and family.

"A Most Private Affair" (1953) is a film directed by John Huston, which is about a love affair between two people from different social classes.

"Wuthering Heights" (1939) is an adaptation of the novel by Emily Bronte, directed by Robert Z. Leonard. It stars Joan Fontaine and Laurence Olivier.

"The Searchers" (1956) is a Western film directed by John Ford, which tells the story of a man (played by John Wayne) who returns to the American West after the Civil War to find his niece.

"North by Northwest" (1959) is a classic Hitchcock film, directed by Alfred Hitchcock. The film stars Cary Grant and Eva Marie Saint.

"The 39 Steps" (1935) is a British film directed by Alfred Hitchcock, which is a black comedy thriller.

"The Magnificent Ambersons" (1942) is a drama film directed by Orson Welles. It is set in the 1930s and tells the story of a wealthy family's decline.

"The Gay Divorcee" (1934) is a musical film directed by George Cukor, which stars Greta Garbo and Fred Astaire.

"The Maltese Falcon" (1941) is a film noir directed by John Huston, which is based on the novel by Dashiell Hammett. It stars Humphrey Bogart and Mary Astor.

"The Big Sleep" (1946) is a film noir directed by Howard Hawks, which is based on the novel by Raymond Chandler. It stars Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall.

"Double Indemnity" (1944) is a film noir directed by Billy Wilder, which is based on the novel by James M. Cain. It stars Barbara Stanwyck and Fred MacMurray.

"Rebecca" (1940) is a classic Hitchcock film, directed by Alfred Hitchcock. It stars Laurence Olivier and Joan Fontaine.

"Sunset Boulevard" (1950) is a film noir directed by Billy Wilder, which stars William Holden and Gloria Swanson.

"The African Queen" (1951) is a classic John Huston film, directed by John Huston. It stars Humphrey Bogart and Katharine Hepburn.

"Schindler's List" (1993) is a historical drama film directed by Steven Spielberg. It stars Liam Neeson and Ben Kingsley.

Blues musicians walk at Cole in workshop, concert

By LEMUEL GONEWELL
Feature Writer

One of the most significant and most striking facts about the way the blues have flourished is the way they have found an outlet in the theaters of Paris. One of the first to realize this was Cole Porter. He discovered the blues in the 1920s and immediately wrote a hit song, "I've Got a Nine-Millimeter Bear." He also wrote the musical "Kiss Me, Kate," which featured the blues in the first scene, and "I've Got a Nine-Millimeter Bear." This song became an instant hit and is still popular today.

The blues have also been embraced by other artists, such as Duke Ellington, who featured them in his compositions like "Saturnine Blues," and Thelonious Monk, who incorporated them into his music. The blues have also been a part of the American musical tradition, as evidenced by the popularity of songs like "St. Louis Blues," "Boogie Woogie," and "The Blues."
