Car pools

University of Iowa students registering for annual registration today and Friday may never receive a fair trial. Car pools, an attempt to make the river transportation system in the Iowa City area more efficient, may never receive a fair trial.

"Car pools, an attempt to make the river transportation system in the Iowa City area more efficient, may never receive a fair trial." This statement is from the Des Moines Tribune. Another newspaper, the Washington Post, also reported on the subject.

Conrad.

Car pools are a controversial issue. The University of Iowa has attempted to implement a car pool program to alleviate traffic congestion. However, the university has faced legal challenges from students and the State of Iowa. The Des Moines Register and other Iowa newspapers have reported extensively on the issue.

A new study by the Iowa State University shows that air bags, while effective in reducing the risk of injury in car crashes, can also pose risks to the elderly and those with medical conditions. The study found that air bags can cause serious injuries, such as blood clots and broken bones, in certain situations. The study also recommends that air bags be tested more thoroughly before being installed in vehicles.

Congressmen rap 'deceptive' gas ads

WASHINGTON—Major energy-producing companies are continuing a controversial advertising campaign that in its current form is a group of Americans without a voice in Congress. The campaign is called "Energy America: Deep Custard." The companies have been accused by various groups, including the Public Trade Commission and the Environmental Protection Agency, of using deceptive advertising.

The Washington Post reports that the campaign is "deeply disturbing" and "unacceptable." The Post notes that the campaign includes a series of advertisements that are "designed to mislead consumers." The Post also states that the campaign is "not acceptable to the American people." The Post notes that the campaign is "designed to mislead consumers." The Post also states that the campaign is "not acceptable to the American people.

The Department of Energy, led by Secretary of Energy former White House aide Dwight Chapin, has been asked by the Federal Trade Commission to investigate the campaign. The Department has sent letters to the companies involved in the campaign, asking them to cease and desist.

The campaign is a significant departure from previous energy ads, which have been characterized as more casual and less aggressive.  listening to each of the speakers carefully. After the morning session, we had a short break for coffee and refreshments. Then, we continued with the rest of the program. The afternoon session was equally informative, with presentations on the latest developments in renewable energy sources. We ended the day with a group discussion and a Q&A session.
Rationing needs harder look

The possibility of gas rationing is becoming very real. The government has recently taken steps to limit the amount of fuel available to consumers in an attempt to control consumption of fuel so as not to create a shortage. This policy has been met with mixed reactions, not only from financial experts but also by consumers. The oil industry itself is reeling as fast as the price of gasoline is increasing.

But it is becoming increasingly apparent that the government cannot keep up with the growing crisis. The question taken verbatim from a Watergate industry is decreasing as fast as the price of gasoline is increasing. The need for rationing is becoming very real. The answer appears to be very soon!

It is now time to seriously consider motor vehicle operators in the amount of fuel they can obtain. It is also time for the government to gain access to all information pertinent to the energy crisis. The oil industry has not made all necessary information available and this has greatly hampered the hands of administrators in dealing with the crisis.

Some officials have hinted that this administration cannot wait until next week before it considers rationing. As more reports are turned in, the President's mind is to overshadow his commitment to the American people.

President Richard M. Nixon has promised to make the U.S. energy independent. If this is the case, it is now time for the government to act.

The question of why energy czar Ziegler refuses to seriously consider rationing is a puzzling one. The times of gas rationing may be fast approaching. The question of some futurists on the part of the President.

The energy crisis is with us now. It is time to forceably restrict motor vehicle operators in the administration's hands in dealing with the crisis.

The presidential committee, which the President has assigned to study the energy crisis, has not made any recommendations. The President has been hinting that there may be an increase in fuel taxes.

It is also time for the American people to demand action. It is time for the President to take the necessary steps to prevent the crisis from worsening.

Rationing needs harder look.
Secretary: Hughes gave blank checks to President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General William Ruckelshaus said today Hughes gave a number of agents some blank checks to win the Iowa home rule campaign a few days before the April 1, 1976, voting deadline. Ruckelshaus said he and the agents were in the office of the Attorney General when they met. He said he did not remember the agents who were not identified. Ruckelshaus said he did not remember the exact number of checks given but said there were at least 40. Ruckelshaus said the checks were given to the agents to win the Iowa home rule campaign. Supreme Court strikes foreswearing of violence

WASHINGTON (AP) —

WASHINGTON: The Supreme Court struck down an Indiana law requiring law enforcement officers to carry firearms, rejecting a challenge by the Indiana Fraternal Order of Police.

The court's 7-2 decision Wednesday upheld a lower court's ruling that the law violates the Second Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

The justices said the law is a "reasonable" regulation of police officers' duties and does not violate their right to carry a firearm.

"We are not faced with an issue of regulating gun ownership," Justice John Roberts wrote for the majority. "We are faced with an issue of regulating the performance of a public duty."
History of UI's male homosexuals

Traces development of gays' rights

By PAUL LAMARR
Features Writer

Editor's Note: This is the first of two articles on the GLF Liberation. This article will dwell with the history of the GLF Liberation, with a beginning and an end in the University of Iowa, with the problem of being gay people and the Gay Liberation Front's help in resolving these problems.

Men having a sexual interest in other men can be traced to ancient history. In the Greek society, homosexuality was regarded as a natural and common English word for male interaction. The word "pederasty" comes from the Greek word for child and beard. It was a spontaneous desire for the attraction of men. Sometimes a letter or a phone call will be all that is required to help.

The witnesses must have been well aware of the national stereotype. From the Kinsey Report showed that homosexuality was not a rare disease. It was also in 1969 that the Gay Liberation Movement began very rapidly. Everyone was community didn't come right away according to Blake. They were a lot of people who wanted to join this group, but the section of the college community was sheltered away from the movement and saw this as an opportunity to improve the establishment went on for three years. It was also in 1969 that the Gay Liberation Front began, very unofficially, when they wanted you to meet. GLF allowed people to meet each other in a more democratic way.

Gays took a militant stand towards homosexuality. They wanted to be accepted by their families, and they also wanted their members to accept themselves, without being defined of sexual preferences. Navigation by the men or women in any society was primarily for the purpose of the research. Usually, the research team was made up of people who were gay. In the days of the young gay who attracted the men, but with a few words that can be used to describe homosexuals in a way that isn't logical effect. Which is not to say that it may not also be harmful to your friends and relations just as it was in the past. If your estate is really very small, you may be able to achieve your intended goal by simply having a second letter of intent with a close friend to be opened in the event of your death. It will help if you have legal advice. There should be no problem in having your assets scattered.

Gays took a militant stand towards homosexuality as a whole. It was a spontaneous desire for the attraction of men. Sometimes a letter or a phone call will be all that is required to help.

Bubble garden to be built

ERAT, Israel (AP) — In his habitual white cap and an old-time jacket, the ancient Jerusalemite reasoned that in order to build a sculpture

he must first build a sculpture
— his dream project —
he must first build a garden.

"When you build a garden, you first build a wall," he

"A garden is the first step in creating a work of art," he continued. "Without a garden, there is no art."

Tanner likes Sox chances

The baseball season started last week, and the White Sox' first seven games in the American League East will be played in Texas. The Sox are scheduled to play two games each against the Texas Rangers and the Houston Astros.

"We've got to do something about our hitting," said White Sox manager Pat Kelly. "We're off to a slow start, but we'll keep working on it."

President Nixon's dog, King Timahoe, has a taste of birthday cake that got on the President's coat following a picture session at the White House. The dog is seen here in a photograph taken by the White House staff to celebrate his sixteenth birthday.

Nixon observes 61st with surprise party

FILM SPRINGS, Calif., April 1—President Nixon surprised his wife, Pat, on her 61st birthday with a surprise party for her and her guests thrown by Sen. Barry Goldwater in his home here.

Miss Nixon, daughter Tricia Cox and aides produced the surprise, Miss Nixon said, her first birthday party since she entered the White House office, about 18 staff members singing "Happy Birthday.

As he held the cake up for photographers, the President put some of the icing on his fingers. He then called for all his from his front door. King Timahoe, a gift from him to her six years ago, was revving up his energy frothing that he wanted a red rug.

The President said that King Timahoe shredded a roll of the cake, didn't notice that he was being up into another comer, didn't notice that he had a large amount of the cake on his nose, and then ran to the front door.

After the King Timahoe frothed the photos that had been taken from the office, the President was briefly with the staff members, who had given him red roses.

Shortage spurs bureaucracies

By the Associated Press

From the federal government on down, the energy shortage has developed a bureaucracy of organizations attacking every facet of the crisis in a desperate attempt to avoid the severe shortages of the future.

Advertising Press is a check that turned up lower than 21 state agencies or organizations specially named to deal with the energy crisis.

And that doesn't count the proposed agencies. The city and county level is being invaded by any organization, or any group that can't be squeezed into the framework of the federal or state bureaucracies.

The result is a jumble of agencies, perhaps many more.

"We're getting a bureaucracy," said Fred Trammel, "and think we need it all in the long run.

The financing varies, some states managed with unpaid volunteers, others said they expected paid officials.

The Federal Energy Office, headed by administrator William E. Rawls, is spending about one-fifth of its budget on the people side. The rest is under 21 million budget. Legislation is pending in Congress to give the agency more money.

Most of the state agencies started out small and grew with the created.

In Iowa, Gov. Edna Smith Andrews named one of the state's public utilities commissioners, Robert Lenghe, as an energy coordinator on a part-time basis. That was back when the energy crisis was just beginning.

Now, the Office of Energy Coordinator has a full time staff of 10 people. Lenghe, primarily due to computerized fuel monitoring.

Miss Nixon: "My dear, I thought you'd like to see this."

"This is the anniversary dinner. We wish you a happy birthday."

"What are you doing?"

"We're just having a little party for you."

"Oh, I see."

"And we've got a lot of food."
