The Daily Iowan

Black author 'first to find foreign roots'

By BATB HUMPHREY

The Iowa City newsweekly has found its first African-American author.

The editors of the Iowan, a community newspaper in Iowa City, have discovered a new contributor: Alex Haley, a Virginia-born writer who has just published his first book, Roots: The Saga of an American Family.

Haley's novel

Haley's novel, which tells the story of an African-American family's journey from slavery to modern-day America, has been hailed as a landmark work in American literature.

Haley's rise

Haley, who had previously worked as a teacher, has been writing for years, but his novel has only now been published. The editors of the Iowan were thrilled to find his work, and they have invited him to contribute regularly.

Haley's future

Haley is currently working on a sequel to Roots and plans to continue writing about the African-American experience in America.

Affirmative Action revises tactics

BY RANDY KISPER
University Editor

The UI has adopted different affirmative action goals for the next three years that are "more subjective" and designed to be more flexible, according to University President Philip Jones, UI director of affirmative action issues Wednesday.

Jones said the methods, required by new federal regulations, were specially set to create uniformity among institutions receiving federal money.

A statistical breakdown of the UI work force by number of women and minority members, in particular type offices and a comparison of the percentages of persons and contributors to UI for the next three years, Jones said, was not available Wednesday.

He emphasized that affirmative action goals and guidelines for achieving them are not to be considered binding but only to be used as a guide. A committee selected each year to examine the goals and their impact. The goals are not subject to review. The UI already had developed a program from the past.

Now known as the UI 800 committee, the group will meet at 8 a.m. today in the Administration Building, Jones said. The group is being organized as part of the new federal guidelines, he explained. The UI had developed a program from the past.

The new program is to be reviewed at the end of the fiscal year for possible change before submitting it to the office of the Department of Education and the UI Board of Regents.

"That's not to say that the statistical method is more reliable," he said, "but it's a more uniform method to encourage institutions for good faith effort." The guidelines for the program are aimed to provide for the measurement of the potential labor pool.

NEW YORK (AP) - Armand Hammer, chairman of the Occidental Petroleum Corp., has purchased Rembrandt's "Juno," an early work of the Dutch master. He paid $13 million for the painting, which was exhibited at the Los Angeles County Art Museum this summer.

The painting will go on display at the Los Angeles museum, which Hammer has blessed with $10 million collection of paintings, in December after being exhibited at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

Art authorities said they believed he was the highest price ever paid for a Rembrandt, either privately or at public auction. The last time for a Rembrandt, sold in 1977 to an unnamed buyer for $23 million for Rembrandt's "Varnished Corneille" that the painting was displayed in New York.

Hammer said in a statement that the painting was "a magnificent work" and that he was "well pleased" with it. In December after being exhibited at the Metropolitan Museum of Art for $13 million, it was purchased by Hammer. The sale of the painting will be held at the Los Angeles museum, which Hammer has blessed with $10 million collection of paintings.

Senate freezes four seats as RA issue gets hotter

ROGER THOMAS

Student Senate President Larry Kerst, left, announced Monday evening that he will freeze four seats in the student senate. Although Kerst, along with Dean Steve Lambert, AA, was not at the meeting, the motion is not what Kerst and Lambert previously said they should be.

Although Kerst was unprepared to give the reasons for his decision, the move was prompted by two recent incidents at the Old Brick dormitory.

According to Lambert, this incident came about after an administrative hearing in February about an incident that occurred last October at the Old Brick dormitory.

"It was an incident where there was a problem," Lambert said. "The student was suspended, and the RA [resident assistant] was also suspended and then rehired, knowing there was an issue with the RA." Lambert added that he was not present at the meeting and did not know why Kerst was bringing up the issue.

The move freezes four seats in the student senate, but Kerst said that he would not be able to provide further details about this decision at this time.

Unresourceful choice

Congress has again allowed economics to win over our natural resources and the existence of wildlife. Congress again failed to pass the wildlife bill on May 24, un雷斯ized by Republican opposition. The President was not expected to veto the measure. Wildlife enthusiasts and conservationists had been urging the government to pass the measure and many state governments and organizations were urging the Senate to pass the bill. The Senate did pass the bill and it was signed into law by the President.

Cockroach-asthma link found in medical study

The University of Iowa Health Care System has found that a high prevalence of asthma in children may be linked to cockroach allergens.

The researchers, at the University of Iowa, have found that children with asthma are more likely to have a higher concentration of cockroach allergens in their homes than children without asthma.

The study, published in the journal Pediatrics, is the first to link cockroach allergens to asthma in children.

The researchers recruited 100 children with asthma and 100 children without asthma and measured the concentration of cockroach allergens in their homes.

They found that children with asthma had significantly higher concentrations of cockroach allergens in their homes than children without asthma.

The study also found that children with asthma who were exposed to high levels of cockroach allergens were more likely to have more severe symptoms of asthma.

The researchers suggest that reducing cockroach allergens in the home could be a potential treatment for asthma in children.

They also recommend that further research be conducted to determine the effectiveness of this approach.

The study was supported by the National Institutes of Health.

England appeals to IMF

London (AP) — Like a man trying to save his family from a brewing storm, the British government on Friday was looking to secure a $3.8 billion loan from the International Monetary Fund to help it weather a debt crisis.

The loan, which would be the biggest ever received by the U.K., is seen as a last-ditch effort to avoid defaulting on its debt and to keep the pound from falling against the dollar.

The government has been working with the IMF for months to put together a package of economic measures that would help it meet its debt obligations.

The package includes tax increases, spending cuts and cuts in the budget deficit.

The IMF said it would need time to review the proposal before making a decision.

The pound has been falling against the dollar in recent weeks, and the government is under pressure to take action to stabilize the currency.

The loan would be used to pay off the country's debts and to fund the deficit.

The government has been criticized for its handling of the economic crisis, and it has been accused of not doing enough to stimulate the economy.

The IMF has recommended that the government take steps to boost growth and create jobs.

The government has said it is committed to implementing the IMF's recommendations.

The loan is expected to be announced by the end of the week.
Stock holders grill Lockheed execs

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) - Shareholders of the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. Wednesday rebounded a report regarding the financial condition of the beleaguered company's Burbank plant by issuing a stream of complaints over the company's troubles.

In a half-hour meeting with the management, shareholders asked for a return on their investments, which is not expected until a return on the company's assets is possible.

The meeting was called for a special meeting of the company's shareholders. It was held in a downtown hotel and attended by over 1,000 shareholders, who were possibly illegal Lockheed investors in members of the Japanese government and Prince Henry of the Netherlands.

Several shareholders complained that the dividend is not receiving a dividend for eight years and that there are no dividends and that the company is not receiving a dividend for eight years.

Further, the shareholders said they were not receiving any dividend payments. These allegations, all of which are lies, caused them to lose their jobs.

Schorr lands job as visiting prof

UC Berkeley

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) - David Schorr, who left a congressional committee by refusing to reveal how he obtained a secret report on government intelligence, was appointed Wednesday as a visiting professor at the University of California.

Schorr resigned Thursday from the CBS television network, which was investigating his connection with the government, and gave the Virginia Poy on the copy of the congressional report dealing with CIA and FBI activities.

Refusing to divulge how he obtained the report, Schorr cited the First Amendment for a free press, was granted the CBS suspension, the House ethics committee last week declined to promote him for the position.

The appointment was approved unanimously by the Berkeley School of Journalism for the spring quarter, which starts Monday.

He will teach in a regular class but will conduct "informal lectures," and report on television, the university said, and he will be paid approximately $25,000.

Edwin H. Burdick, Dean of the School of Journalism, and Schorr "will bring an up-to-date knowledge of news and government," he said. The university hopes to have Schorr teach for the entire quarter.

Schorr's resignation from CBS prompted that he will continue to correct his errors under the contract signed in 1973 provided he does not go to work for another network.

Upsets become norm in college football

Sporprisingly rarely takes hold entirely, and the same is true of the college football season. And while the college football season has its share of ups and downs, the norm is now to see upsets as the new norm. Since Missouri beat USC on Saturday and Iowa lost to the Royals on Tuesday, it is no longer too much to expect a decent amount of excitement in the transfer to prosperity. It is easy to see how the football season has changed since Iowa lost to the Royals.

Dedicated ‘walk-ons’ beat the odds with pride

by STERLING STYLER

Staff Writer

At one point in any college football game, it might be tempting to walk across the field and see what’s going on. The players on the field are usually the ones who are actually playing football. They have an opportunity to play. The fans are usually the ones who are not necessarily interested in a game, but are there to support their team. They just want to see the game.

Morton's no-hitter

ATLANTA (AP) — San Francisco's Barry Bonds homered and drove in five runs to lead all hitters in a 9-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs Wednesday night.

Bonds matched his own single-season home run record and drove in five runs to lead the Giants to their fourth straight win.

Bonds homered in the third inning and had four RBIs, including a three-run shot in the sixth that gave San Francisco a 9-0 lead.

The victory is San Francisco's fourth straight win, improving their record to 36-26. The Cubs are now 24-38.

Bonds hit his 49th home run of the season, breaking his own mark he set last year. He now has 10 home runs in 10 games this season.

The Giants are now 8-1 in games Bonds has homered in, while the Cubs are 1-9 in games he's homered in.

Bonds is now tied with Babe Ruth for second in home runs all-time with 754.
